THREE ALARM FIRE ON FEDERAL STREET

Department Makes Great Fight to Check Big Down-Town Blaze—Men and Women Flee.

Twenty men and four women fled down fire escapes from the fifth and sixth floor levels and five men went down the ladder of an aerial truck from the sixth floor during a three-alarm fire at No. 91 Federal street this noon.

At one o'clock, when the firemen thought they had the flames under control, it was roughly estimated that $20,000 damage, mainly by smoke, had been caused.

THOUSANDS SEE MEN ESCAPE.

The fire brought thousands of spectators, coming as it did during the noon hour in one of the busiest sections of the city.

The daring escape of five men down the length of an aerial truck was applauded by the spectators, who were given a most practical demonstration of how an aerial furnishes escape from lofty floors when other means are cut off.

The fire started in the basement of the Globe-Wernicke Company, No. 91 Federal street. This concern occupies the entire basement and ground floor. The first alarm was sounded just after 12 o'clock. The majority of office holders and tenants were at lunch.

Saved by Aerial Truck.

Five men came down the aerial truck ladder from a sixth floor window to the street. Their names are: H. A. Wood, A. B. Smith, H. E. Dickerman, A. J. Paston and R. Crosby.

At the start of the fire Chief Mullen sent a detail of firemen up through the building, calling on occupants to come down the main stairway as quickly as possible.

The fast-rolling smoke gathered behind this warning squad and cut off escape by the stairway, though the men sounding the warnings through the upper floors did not know this fact.

Hardly had the big aerial truck been raised to the sixth floor when H. A. Wood appeared at a sixth-story window. The forms of other men could be made out, pressing close behind him.

Hardly had the top of the ladder lodged against the side of the building when Wood clambered out of the window to the slender ladder framework, twisted himself around to favorable position and descended to the ground. He was given a round of cheers by the spectators.

The other men behind Wood, Messrs. Smith, Dickerman, Paston and Crosby, followed him as closely as safety permitted. All the men were pretty well filled up with smoke and were gasping for breath when they reached the ground.

Suffers From Smoke.

Mr. Dickerman was the worst sufferer by smoke of the five. At the last of his descent of the ladder he had to be assisted.

The second floor is occupied by Edward E. Babb Company, school supplies; the third by Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company, publishers; the fourth by L. J. Mott Company, makers of tops and rubber fabrics; the fifth by Kendall, Taylor & Company, architects, and the Lockwood-Greene Company, architects; the sixth by the Lawton Mills Corporation, the Plainfield Mills Company and additional offices of the Lockwood-Greene Company.

Occupants of the four lower floors were able to get down the main stairways. Both elevators were cut by clouds of smoke which rolled up from the basement.

The Lockwood-Greene Company has a force of sixty clerks and draughtsmen, most of whom eat luncheon in the offices. Some of these were trapped, with clerks in the other offices, on the fifth and sixth floors.

The first one out when the first alarm was given, managed to get down the stairway. But the others, nearly thirty people, were turned back. Most of these fled to the fire escapes and made their way safely to the ground.

But the five men who went down the aerial ladder were on the sixth floor and did not have time to get to the stairway and preferred the aerial ladder to the fire escapes as being quicker.

Many Are Overcome.

Eight stenographers were driven in a bunch from the sixth-floor office. They fled without clothing even to take their coats, hats or handbags.

Fire Commissioner Daly was on the scene early.

The dense smoke made the fire a difficult one for the firemen. Many were overcome and were forced back into the street for fresh air.

At the corner of Franklin and Federal street, and numbered 73 Federal street, is the Rand-Avery building. The basement and street floor are occupied by the National Sportsman Company, carrying quantities of ammunition. The firemen worked with particular effort to cop the flames from that locality.

F. E. Sheedi, head of the engineering department and vice-president of the concern, smelled smoke coming up the stairway. He ran to all the departments notifying them that the building was on fire.

Plunge Through Smoke.

By this time thick volumes of smoke were pouring up the stairways. Some of the employes ran through the blinding smoke and reached the street in safety. About a score, including four girls employed as stenographers by the concern, made their way down the fire escapes in the rear of the building.

A number of men and women employed by the F. J. Barnard Company, book binders, and the Old Roberts Binderr Company on Sullivan place, directly in the rear of the burning structure, fled to the street through stifling smoke. Most of the employes of these concerns were out at lunch.

Dropped from Roof.

A young woman employed by the Barnard Company, who refused to give her name, partly overcome by the smoke, was assisted down the ladder by firemen from the fifth story of the building. She was revived when she reached the street, and immediately telephoned home that she was able to get down the main stairways. Both safe.

SEVEN PERISH IN EQUITABLE BUILDING FIRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Seven million dollars' loss was caused to-day by a fire that destroyed the magnificent building of the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Four persons are known to be dead and three others are missing, believed to be buried in the ruins of the historic marble structure that made up the entire block between Nassau, Pine and Cedar streets and Broadway.

The known dead are:

William Champion, watchman employed by the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company.

Deputy Fire Chief Walsh.

The injured:

William Giblin, president of the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company, severely burned and suffering from shock.

Leander Delk, porter, overcome by smoke.

Frederick Peterson, burned and overcome by smoke.

William Sheehan, watchman, employed by the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company, severely burned; taken to Hudson Street Hospital.

Deputy Fire Chief Killed.

Deputy Fire Chief Walsh and several firemen were trapped on the fourth floor. The firemen escaped, but no trace could be found of Walsh. Fire Chief Kenlon personally made an investigation but could not find his deputy and at 10:30 o'clock Walsh was given up for dead.

Financial conditions in New York were badly upset as a result of the fire. The governing committee of the stock exchange at a special meeting decided to have deliveries to-day suspended except by mutual consent. A vast number of securities were tied up by the fire.

Many of the fire fighters were injured by flying debris and one of the most thrilling and heart-rending scenes of the conflagration was the death of three men who were trapped in the cupola. All perished when the roof fell.

William Giblin, president of the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company, which had offices in the Equitable Building, had a narrow escape while trying to rescue valuable documents from the basement. Giblin, after having been reported killed several times, was finally carried out unconscious. It was said his chance for life was a slender one.

Imprisoned for Two Hours.

For more than two hours Giblin was held a prisoner behind the iron bars of the safe deposit cage while flames surged about him and debris was hurled down from the crumbling floors above. The firemen had to saw through the iron bars before they could get at Giblin and in the meantime the prisoner pleaded piteously for them to hurry, crying out that he was being roasted alive.

Despite the tremendous exertions of the firemen to keep the flames confined to the lower floors, the blaze lapped its way up

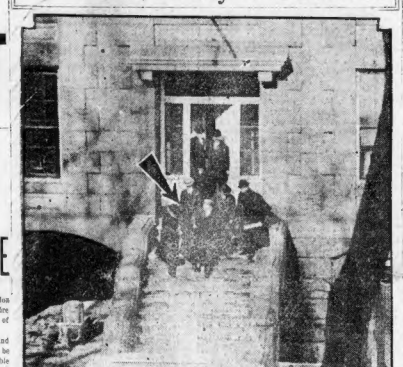
Carrying Richeson from Jail to Van, on Way to Courthouse



This picture, taken by American Photographer Radway, shows the self-confessed murderer being carried in a chair from the Charles Street Jail to be sentenced to death in the electric chair. Richeson lowered his head to avoid having his features photographed.

WILHELMINA RUNS ASHORE

The big freight steamer Wilhelmina, owned by A. H. Bull & Company of New York, which left Boston yesterday, went ashore to-day off Provincetown, east of Truro Meeting House on the inside of the Cape. From present indications she will be a total wreck.

Bravely battling with choppy seas and ice floes which twice capsized their little craft, Captain Irwin Collins and a life-saving crew of six men from the Pamet River life-saving station fought their way to the stranded steamer shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. The boat was hauled over to Truro by four horses.

The first attempt of the life savers was unsuccessful, as the heavy sea tipped over the little boat and hurled it back on to the beach. Undaunted, the life savers tried again. This time an ice floe jammed the craft and drove it back. The third attempt was successful and after a hard tussle with rolling seas the life savers landed on the stranded vessel.

At present they are in the same fix as those on board, it being impossible for them to get back to the shore.

The vessel is in a perilous condition, being surrounded by ice. There is a nasty sea running and the wind is west-northwest and blowing fifty-five miles an hour. She is considerably out of the water, it being possible to see her propeller from the shore.

Heavy seas prevented the United States revenue cutter Gresham and the sea going tug Mary Arnold of Plymouth from reaching the Wilhelmina. Both vessels got within a mile of the stranded ship this morning but were forced to put back into Provincetown harbor.

Later in the day, when the tide is high, an attempt will be made to pull her off the bar.

DEATH TAKES MGR. BYRNE

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. William Byrne, rector of St. Cecilia's Church, Back Bay, died early to-day, after an illness of eight days. He was forced to take to his bed a week ago Saturday night from an attack of the grippe and acute bronchitis. He has been failing rapidly and the end came this morning following a sinking spell, which began at 6 o'clock last evening.

Monsignor Byrne, one of the two ecclesiasts attached to the Boston archdiocese who held the calot rank of the monsignori, that of protho notary apostolic, was one of the best known clergymen of New England. During the life of the late Archbishop Williams, Monsignor Byrne had been vicar-general of the archdiocese for more than a quarter of a century.

He was the pastor of St. Joseph's Church in the West End when Cardinal O'Connell and the Rt. Rev. Joseph G. Anderson, the auxiliary bishop, were curates there. He was a priest of decided activity for many years, and his labors extended over a wide field. He was ordained forty-eight years ago, being one of the senior priests of the diocese.

He received the degree of doctor of divinity in 1890 from Georgetown College. On returning to Boston he went to the cathedral, where he was administrator of the archdiocese during the absence of Archbishop Williams until February 4, 1891, when he was appointed pastor of St. Joseph's Church in the West End. On January 12, 1895, Mgr. Byrne increased the church property by the pur-

I'M GUILTY IN FIRST DEGREE, SAYS PASTOR

The Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson pleaded guilty to-day to the murder by poison of Avis Linnell and was sentenced to death in the week beginning May 19.

The sentence of death was pronounced by Judge Sanderson in the first sessions of the Superior Criminal Court at 12:39 o'clock.

When Richeson was asked whether he was guilty of first degree murder, he replied in a low voice:

"Yes, guilty of murder in the first degree."

The reading of Richeson's confession by District Attorney Pelletier before the death sentence was passed was one of the dramatic and impressive features of the tense event.

NODS APPROVAL AS CONFESSION IS READ.

Richeson, pale, emaciated, weak and nodding on the bar in front of him, nodded emphatically two or three times, rather feebly, when the confession was being read.

Richeson was brought from the Charles street jail to the court house, reaching the latter building at 11:45. He was so weak that it was deemed advisable to carry him in a chair up the steps into the detention room. In charge of him were Deputy Sheriffs Lane and Burns.

His lawyers, John L. Lee, William A. Morse and Phillip R. Dunbar, saw him in the detention room a short time and then walked into the court room and took seats with him in the bar enclosure.

Prisoner Very Weak.

It was 12:38 when the door on which all eyes were glued was opened and Richeson walked in. He walked slowly and it was apparent that he was very weak. He was nothing like the trim, strong athletic looking man who had been arraigned in the same court a few weeks ago.

Richeson walked toward a chair that had been placed beside the prisoner's cage. Before he could sit down in it his name was called by Clerk Manning. Manning said:

"Clarence V. T. Richeson, you are charged with murder. Do you wish to retract your plea of not guilty?"

"Yes," replied Richeson, speaking in a low but clear voice, "I am guilty of murder in the first degree."

Within the bar enclosure at this time representing the State were District Attorney Pelletier and Assistants Webber and Lavelle. Medical Examiner Leary, also connected with the case, was there.

Judge Sanderson, reading from a paper, said to Richeson:

"Punishment Is Death."

"In this plea you plead guilty to a charge of the murder of Avis Linnell by giving her cyanide of potassium, a deadly poison, with malice aforethought. If a person procures cyanide of potassium, knowing it to be a deadly poison and brings it about that another person shall take that poison, there has been premeditation.

"No other punishment than death is provided for this crime."

"Have you pleaded guilty to such a crime as this?" the Judge asked Richeson.

"Yes, sir," said Richeson. His voice was very weak and could hardly be heard.

"Have you made this plea freely and voluntarily?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you do it on the advice of counsel?"

"I don't understand," said Richeson with a puzzled look on his face.

The Judge restated the question.

"Yes, sir," replied Richeson.

Makes No Further Statement.

"Do you care to consult counsel further?"

"My counsel are here in court."

"Do you care to consult them?"

"No, sir."

"Do you count on either side have anything to say?"

There was no response. Then Judge Sanderson said:

"The plea is received and entered."

"Do you care to make any further statement?" Richeson was asked.

"Some more than I have already made."

"Clarence V. T. Richeson—" the Judge began and stopped. Turning to District Attorney Pelletier Judge Sanderson said:

"Do you care to move for sentence?"

"I think it proper at this time," said the District Attorney, "to read the confession of Mr. Richeson which I have in my hands."

Confession Is Read.

Mr. Pelletier then read the following confession:

Boston, January 5, 1912.

John L. Lee, Esq.,
William A. Morse, Esq.,
Phillip R. Dunbar, Esq.,

Gentlemen—Deeply penitent for my sin, and earnestly desiring, as far as in my power lies, to make atonement, I hereby confess that I am guilty of the offence of which I stand indicted.

I am moved to this course by no inducement or self-benefit or leniency.

Richeson as is my crime, God has not wholly abandoned me, and my conscience and manhood, somewhat depraved and blighted, will not admit of my still further wronging or a public trust per whose pure young life I have destroyed.

Under the inchings of remorse I have suffered and am suffering the tortures of the damned. In this I find a measure of comfort.

In my mental anguish I recognize that there is still, by the mercy of the Master, some remnant of the divine seed of goodness and likeness with me.

I would wish to live only because within some unseen walks, I might, in some small measure, undo some sinful past, help some other desperate soul and, at last, find favor with my God.

I am instructed to deliver this to the District Attorney or to the judge of the court.

Sincerely yours,

CLARENCE V. T. RICHESON.

Moves for Sentence.

District Attorney Pelletier said:

"I think it may be proper at this time to state that the Commonwealth has been and is ready to proceed with the case. I wish to state that it is my honest opinion, if such a statement is proper for me to make, that the Commonwealth's evidence is sufficient to convince the ordinary jury that the defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree.

"It is my solemn duty now to formally move that sentence of death be pronounced."

The District Attorney then sat down.

Judge Sanderson said, turning to Richeson:

"Have you any statement to make before sentence is pronounced?"

Richeson's answer was cool and calm. He said:

"No, sir, nothing further than I have already stated."

Judge Sanderson then arose, and there was a move among the stenographers to do the same, although they had been warned before the proceedings began to remain seated. The deputies quickly restrained those who stood up, and they were quietly seated.

Judge Sanderson then said:

"It is my painful duty to pronounce sentence.

"Clarence V. T. Richeson, it is the sentence of this court that you be taken to the jail in the city of Boston and there be kept within close custody until within ten days and not less than ten days, and that you shall be taken from the jail to the State Prison in the city of Boston and there be kept, and sometime in the week beginning on the first day of May, you shall suffer death by having electricity pass through your body."

Richeson showed no emotion throughout the proceedings except when Judge Sanderson in his sentence said "by the passing of electricity through your body." Then a flush came behind his eyes and he continually gulped and swallowed.

His hands were laid flat on the rail in front of him and he clutched at them.

The hope of life is strong in the man, though. And now he and his attorneys are mustering their forces for an appeal to the Governor of the Commonwealth, and to his Council.

RICHESON IN COURT TO HEAR SENTENCE

Sentenced to death, all appeals refused, Phelps appealed to the last Council for clemency. The appeal was refused. But at a last effort secured a respite till January 20, and gave an opportunity to present the case to the new Council at their first meeting to-morrow.

That is the case of Silas Phelps, ignorant, friendless, and convicted of a murder in the heat of a chase in which his own liberty was the forfeit.

Clarence Richeson is a man of good blood, education and training, a minister of the Gospel. He met, in one of his parishes, a little girl, still in her teens. They became engaged, and Miss Herbert D. Nutter, solutely, and believed his promises.

He was transferred to another church. He met another girl. This girl was a little older, and was wealthy and well connected. He found that she, too, loved him.

Her love made marriage with the other appear a mesalliance.

So Mr. Richeson rid himself of the little Hyannis girl and, when the hue and cry at her death was raised, fled to the home of the other, and bid there, refusing to appear or make any explanation of his friendship for the dead girl.

He was arrested there, and went to the jail, decorous, smiling, genial about his breakfast.

In the jail cell he awaited trial, patiently at first, till the gnawing of remorse, lifting with every beat of receiving, forced him to burst the bonds of restraint.

Then he confessed to a sordid, cold blooded poisoning, the betrayal of the girl who had trusted him.

Poisoner Asks Mercy.

And asks mercy from the chief officer of the Commonwealth.

The Executive Council that is expected to decide the fate of Richeson is composed of Lieutenant-Governor Robert Luce of Somerville and Councillors Eben S. Keith of Sandwich, J. Stearns Cushing of Norwood, John Quinn of Boston, Alexander McGregor of Malden, Dr. F. A. Prentiss of Haverhill, Herbert E. Fletcher of Westford, Winfield S. Slocum of Webster and A. H. Goetting of Springfield. A majority vote is necessary to approve action by the Governor.

The very manner in which the Rev. Mr. Richeson set about the destruction of Avis Linnell, together with other actions of his, and the fact that a strain of insanity is said to be in his family, will be laid before Governor Foss and the Executive Council—the real jury in the case now—as indications of an unbalanced mind.

"Is it logical to believe that a man should buy cyanide of potassium for the purpose of killing another from a druggist who was to be acquainted and with if he were of normal mind?" Mr. Lee asked.

"Is there not something lacking in the mental make-up of a man who buys poison to administer it to a girl he wanted to put out of the way, would admit to the brutality that the bowl he had been mixing it in had contained a deadly poison?

"Do you mean that Richeson lacked intelligence; was not normal mentally?" Mr. Lee was asked.

"Richeson is quite intelligent, a quite brilliant young man, so far as that goes."

Is Richeson Insane?

"That is not for me to say."

To Mr. Lee, Richeson is a peculiarly constituted man, temperamentally. Richeson may endure the ordeal with the same stoicism that has characterized his every movement from the time of his arrest, or he may collapse completely. He is a man of iron nerve, the exemplification of which is, but he has exhibited on many occasions, at least, he is a moral coward.

Physically, the prisoner seems able to bear the strain. Dr. Howard A. Lothrop, who has seen him almost daily for nearly three weeks, said yesterday that Richeson was physically normal. His recovery from the wounds of his own infliction is practically complete."

The effect of Richeson's confession on Miss Edmunds is not known. She disappeared soon after the murder, and her whereabouts is a mystery. Last night there was a report about New York that she was staying at the home of relatives. Dr. and Mrs. Herbert D. Nutter, 153 Oak avenue, Richmond Hill, L. I., but the story could not be verified.

Attorney Morse Ill.

That Richeson was not in court yesterday was due to the illness of William A. Morse, one of his counsel.

Attorney Morse, it is stated, was suffering from a nervous breakdown.

A former law is unfamiliar with Massachusetts criminal proceedings, and for that reason he would much prefer to have Mr. Morse at his side for the defendant was originally been planned.

It was reported yesterday that If Attorney Morse was unable to go into court to-day, Attorney Moore alone would act. Attorney Philip R. Dunbar will represent Richeson.

Richeson to-day will be taken from the jail in a closed van and then piloted through the crowd by a squad of police, those who happen in the near by corridors can see him. Sheriff Hall has ordered a double guard of officers to attend to the courthouse doors and there probably will be only room for a few spectators in the court room outside of the lawyers and newspapermen.

Attorney General Pugsley probably will return to his home in Virginia after the court proceedings to-day. He will have confidence in his friends in Massachusetts and the local attorneys will have ample opportunity to take whatever action they deem necessary.

PASTORS AGAINST COMMUTATION OF DEATH SENTENCE

A large majority of Boston clergymen interested in the Richeson case agree that there should be no commutation of the death penalty.

The Rev. W. H. van Allen said: "I am preaching next Sunday on the Richeson affair, and prefer to reserve my remarks until then. With this terrible case forced on our notice, and with the moral clamoring for exposition, there is no need just now to search the scriptures for an appropriate and timely text.

"As regards capital punishment generally, reasons will suggest themselves under different circumstances. I am opposed to it should go slow in advancing their views. I am at heart opposed, for a long time against it, and need have no hesitation in declaring myself as opposed to the death penalty because, it seems to me, driven as we are by the Italians of bloodier ages, because it entails a moral wrong on those who execute it, and because I doubt very much its efficacy in preventing murder.

"Again, it is irrevocable, and only the Great Judge, who knows the inmost secrets of a man's heart, is qualified to pronounce an irrevocable sentence.

"I would have justice swift, severe and dignified, with a prospect of liberty, if fresh evidence should warrant it, in any case, with a man's whole life left him for repentance and prayer.

The Rev. G. W. King of the People's Temple said: "Capital punishment is either justified in this case, or will never again be justifiable in the future. In this case approaches pretty near the limit of human depravity. The chance that the appointment is only temporary. Mr. Shuster will have been on Thursday.

The Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin opposed capital punishment in all cases.

The Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage, pastor emeritus of the Church of the Unity, said: "I am opposed to capital punishment in all cases. I do not believe in the principle of capital punishment. As a young man, I was strongly in favor of the 'eye for an eye' doctrine, but I have developed. They appeared at the clerk of the court's office and the circumstances of the prospective bride is unusually attractive and is as American.

The Rev. J. A. Richards, Mount Vernon Congregational Church, said:

"There is no reason whatever, but quite the contrary, against dealing out the extreme penalty of the law here.

"Much is made, in some quarters, of the moral torture that the guilty man has endured. It may be so, but I am sure in estimating the amount of moral retribution that has come about this way we are arguing from what they believe would happen in their own cases. We are not into account sufficiently the very special psychology which the history of the case shows Richeson to possess."

MORE BABIES IN CARE OF CHILDREN'S AID

A marked increase in the number of children under care was a feature of the reports made to the board of directors of the Children's Aid Society at its regular monthly meeting at the Twentieth Century Club. The secretary, Miss Prentice Murphy, reported that between October 1, 1911, and January 1, 1912, 96 more children had been placed in family homes, making a total of 286 cases for the society during this period. This is an addition of almost 7 per cent. over the number cared for during the corresponding period of the last fiscal year, which was 268.

The dances, Chief Matthews says, will be allowed to proceed as formerly, but the objectionable dances will be stopped.

CRANE, COLLEGE FOE, DIES AT 80

Richard T. Crane, the Chicago millionaire, whose charges concerning drinking at Harvard and other American universities were recently printed in the Sunday AMERICAN, is dead at his home in Chicago, eightieth year, according to dispatches received on Sunday. His death followed only a few days upon another attack of pneumonia, it was said.

Last year Mr. Crane sent statistics to be gathered concerning college life, and the figures he gathered were the basis for criticism of the leading Eastern universities, Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Princeton and Columbia were severely denounced.

"Rich men's sons drink," said Mr. Crane, "and they drink to excess. It is a curse, a terrible curse. Drunkenness is more common among the students of Harvard than among students of any other college in the country. Some years ago that college was known as a drinking college, but it has been more than 30 years since it was called drunk. At least 25 students have been suspended or dismissed from Harvard because they drank to excess. In fact, I understand that more than 100 students have been suspended or dismissed from Harvard during the present college year for drunkenness.

"Drunkenness is equally prevalent at the University of Illinois, Mr. Crane said:

"The further I go into this education question the more firmly am I convinced that I was right when I took the ground some years ago that this university as well as all others ought to be burned down and that the money spent on them should be expended where it would do good."

Mr. Crane described his efforts to learn the employment and remuneration of graduating in civil and electrical engineering, graduates from the academic department and the school for business training and from the agricultural school. He said he found only a small percentage of the civil engineers working for representative firms and that they for a "remuneration of about one-third of that commanded by a skilled mechanic."

The agricultural department of the university was also scored by Mr. Crane, who said:

"The university trained farmer is not in demand by farmers generally, in fact they would not care to have one of these "gentlemen farmers" on their farms."

Mr. Crane was without the advantages of a college education, but he characterized it —of university training and worked his way from the ranks to the head of a prosperous working company. He contended all the time that the professors and the university were useless fixtures and that the money devoted to them should be spent in some more profitably in extending industrial education and helping persons who had met with adverse fate.

ward and within half an hour the fifth and sixth floors were engulfed with fire. The seventh and eighth came next and then the flames burst through the roof, sending up a shower of sparks and flame like the eruption of a huge volcano.

Fanned by a high wind which was driving in from the bay, the sparks and flames were carried in the wind near to adjoining structures.

The firemen had to keep playing water on them to prevent their burning.

The roof crashed in about 7 o'clock, carrying down with it the men who were there fighting the flames.

The crash was accompanied with a mighty roar and a huge cloud of flames and sparks were reported upward as the debris from the roof was precipitated to the interior. Thousands of spectators who jammed the streets near the fire saw the men on top of the building swallowed up as the roof fell.

Make Heroic Fight.

The firemen made daring efforts to rescue the men, who were powerless in the terrific heat. The early apparatus on the scene carried ladders that reached only to the fifth floor. Firemen worked from the extension ladders with names being called for relatives and their faces. Many were seriously burned, but stuck to their posts. Huge pieces of masonry and other debris, which was blown from the roof by a terrific gale, fell in the streets, carried in a storeroom adjoining the Cafe Savarin, that famous restaurant of Mrs. Hazen Hyde when he held a salon in the days of the Equitable. Fifteen girls employed at the store were about twenty men, consisting of Chief Engineer Hall, his assistants, window cleaners and watchers.

Many were injured in a standpipe was brought into play, while two men got excellent vantage points on the fifth floor of the storeroom seemed only to add to the intensity of the fire.

Two girls, it is said, were forced to save the fire's good start. Fotheeman Foley said: "I was in the building and ran to the door for the men to let me in, but they refused. They seemed to want to have an alarm turned in. Then I kicked on the door and threatened to arrest them. Then someone opened the door.

Though the Equitable is supposed to be completely fireproof when completed in 1887, it proved a regular tinderbox when put to the test.

Building Planned by Hyde.

The original building of the block was opened on May, 1870. From time to time additional ground was taken and built upon until 1887 the entire structure was enlarged and remodeled. It was considered the most notable pile of real estate owned and occupied by a single owner in the city. When the passenger elevators were installed in 1870 they were the first to be used in a business block in the city.

The building was planned by the trustees of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, headed by the father of James Hyde, in the rotunda over the entrance the building of the floor of the elaborate stairway there was erected a statue of the founder of the society.

August Belmont occupied a private office on the second floor on the Broadway side and lately the greater part of the fifth floor has been given over to corporation attorneys and those interested in railroad legal work.

The Harriman interests had expensively equipped offices occupying more than a floor, and the Rock Island interests also had offices in two upper part of the building.

On the second floor the Lawyers' Club was located. Memberships of this association were considered very valuable. Almost the most complete law library in the building were the rooms formerly occupied by James Hazen Hyde. It was testified in the insurance hearings that the son and heir of the founder of the life assurance society had spent money with a free hand and that the money had been charged to the society.

The firemen fought from the roofs of adjoining buildings and soon after the blaze started were sent to the roof of the building at the northeast corner of Cedar and Nassau streets to put out a slight blaze.

The American Surety building on the south of the Equitable and the Morton Trust Company Bank on the north were in danger of attack by the flames. The windows were rapidly broke and the firemen did everything in their power to prevent inflammable material on the inside from taking fire.

Trapped by Flames.

One of the pathetic features of the fire was that those working inside did not realize the great danger from its quick spread, and so tried to fight the flames. They remained too long and suffered death.

One of the exciting incidents of the fire occurred when a part of the north side wall of the building fell, crashing down upon a fire escape and an iron engine. Firemen were barely able to escape.

Friends of Hyde, in the home of President Gillin that he had been killed in the fire. Mrs. Hyde is in a dying condition from illness and relatives at the residence said they could not bring the news to her for fear the shock would kill her.

Under the glare of the fire, twenty firemen narrowly escaped death from a falling portion of the Broadway wall when they were driven back by the flames. Through smoke, past flames and torrents of ice they made their way down, they fought their way to a basement window.

PLAN CONVENTION SO GIRLS MAY PROPOSE

SAVANNAH, Jan. 9.—In order to give impetus to leap year proposals, it has been arranged to hold a bachelors and maids' convention at La Grange, at which the unmarried will gather from all parts of Georgia and eastern Alabama. A number of prominent citizens are interested in the undertaking. Mayor John R. Edmundson and Postmaster Charles Hardwick and D. Gaffney and Robert L. Young will be on hand to perform marriage ceremonies and rates on licenses will be given during the convention. The matter originated as a jest, but it is now certain that such a convention will be held. Those back of the movement are of the opinion that bashfulness is the only reason why there are bachelors and old maids at all, and that if the girls are given proper opportunity during leap year there will at a speedy change in conditions.

HICHBORN ASKS DIVORCE FROM HIS ELOPING WIFE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—When Philip Hichborn filed suit here against his young and beautiful wife, quite naturally attention was again drawn to the fact of her elopement last year with Horace Wylie, who deserted his wife and children to fly with her.

The divorce suit followed a remarkable series of developments which will always make the Wylie-Hichborn story one to rank with the most unusual of love tales.

Wylie and Mrs. Hichborn are said to be together in the south of Europe now. They have taken steps to sever all connections with the world that they once knew. They reached the decision to spend the rest of their lives together after careful consideration following their first flight.

Before they reached this final determination Mrs. Hichborn, who wanted to be sure that no mistake would be made, caused Wylie to leave her abroad, return to this country, become reconciled with his wife and live with her for five months, so that he might definitely know if his happiness lay in being back with his family or if he felt a desire to return to the woman with whom he had fled.

Gave Wife a Fortune.

Wylie made the experiment. Try as he might to be the husband and father that he once had been, the temptation Mrs. Hichborn held for him was too strong to be resisted. So he went back to her.

But before he went he transferred to his wife and children all his extensive Washington real estate holdings, amounting to something like $300,000, and settled upon her half of his personal estate, her share coming to more than $100,000.

Then he resigned from those clubs from which he had not been dropped, and, chucking pursuers, went to Europe by way of Boston. He was joined in May by November by Mrs. Hichborn, who had sailed from Montreal.

About a month ago the two were seen in Winchester Cathedral, England, attending service by each other. They were known as Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wylie. Since then they have been met in Paris and on the Riviera.

In the method chosen by the two to satisfy themselves as to where their happiness lay Mrs. Hichborn wished to put herself as well as Wylie to the test. She was to return to her husband to learn if she could not be contented with him. Those who were close in confidence say the Pennsylvania woman's mind was moved by her reading of an erring husband and wife in the English nobility who were forgiven and permitted to their homes only to desert them again when they found their first impulse was the true one.

The wide gossip that elopement had caused was a factor also in the plan that she insisted upon putting into operation. If they found their flight had been the outcome of a momentary infatuation the opportunity to rectify the error would be seized. If they decided that each was the other more than they wanted the good opinion of the world, then could be a second flight.

As a result they are together now in a calm of their own making that they hope will last for life.

Gossip Was Hushed.

Wylie's return to his family was so open and the story so widely circulated that it had the desired effect of hushing gossip. He carried out the plan as conceived, but Mrs. Hichborn was not so successful.

When she returned to this country last Spring it was reported that she was to be reunited to her husband. Her beauty and charm had always held him a captive, and it was generally believed that he would consent to receive her again. But his mother, the widow of Admiral Hichborn, and his sister, Mrs. Martha Hichborn Bisbie Pearsall, would not hear of a reconciliation.

When she found that her "trial reconciliation" was made impossible by the opposition, Mrs. Hichborn awaited the outcome of Wylie's experiment. After a stay in the Summer home of her mother, Mrs. Boyd, Solicitor-General Henry M. Hoyt, near Boston, she came to Washington unobserved.

Hichborn Was Stubborn.

While Wylie was putting the acid test to his love for her, Mrs. Hichborn, finding no other way left open, sought to cause her husband to divorce her. She knew that if Wylie did not return to her she would be a free woman, while if he returned there would be a stop nearer marriage.

But Mr. Hichborn was stubborn. He would not say whether or not he intended to divorce her. Friends thought he wanted to prevent her from marrying Wylie. Others believed he was waiting until the first Mrs. Wylie should decide.

On the complaint filed in the courts the facts of the first flight are recited. It is set forth that Mrs. Hichborn and Wylie fled from Washington on December 16, 1910, to Canada, where they took ship for Europe. Then this statement is made:

It is a matter of notoriety that said defendant and correspondent eloped together and traveled and remained together at New York, Quebec, Liverpool, London, Paris, Turino, Monte Carlo and other places, and that no contradiction has been attempted from any source.

Hichborn Marriage in 1908.

Hichborn married the twenty-year-old daughter of Solicitor General Hoyt in 1908. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Satterlee and all official Washington was at the wedding. The bridegroom was the son of a former chief counsel of the navy. He had lived not far from the bride for several years.

About a block away lived Wylie with his wife, who had been married Harriette Hopkinson, and their three children. He was almost sorry when he first knew Elinor Hoyt, which was before the "coming-out" party. He always seemed to take a fatherly interest in her.

After the young Hichborns set up housekeeping they became very friendly with the Wylies. It was common to see both the women under the arms of one of the men and sometimes Mr. Wylie was seen cavalierring Mrs. Hichborn alone.

Mrs. Hichborn was athletic and loved outdoor sports and indoor games. Mr. Hichborn's is of less diversified character. Wylie, in spite of his forty odd years, liked the same things that interested his young neighbor.

Mrs. Wylie a Devoted Wife.

Mrs. Wylie, after the birth of her third child, was less active than she had been before. She had been married for almost twenty years and her devotion to her husband was great. She was the leader in the Circle, which had been the home of Wylie's father, the judge, now a relic of a hospitality.

Mr. Wylie was in comfortable circumstances and had no need to work, beyond taking care of his real estate.

When he disappeared and at the same time Mrs. Hichborn dropped from sight, it was more than the most subtle form of this gossipy city could believe. The families succeeded in keeping the fact quiet for almost two weeks. There was no strong confirmation of the rumors that had brought Mrs. Hoyt persistent in the fiction that grief at the death of her father had caused Mrs. Hichborn to retire to a sanatorium.

Hichborn and Mrs. Wylie could nothing. But their reserve was not shared by the couple who were "eloping" together.

It comes out now that Mrs. Hichborn wrote to her family and her husband that for the first time in her life she was entirely happy, and that they need never expect her to return.

Mrs. Hoyt Went to Europe.

In the hope she still might do something to end the scandal, Mrs. Hoyt went to Europe and met the pair near Paris. With her was her other daughter, Mrs. Ferdinand von Stumm, wife of the German Secretary of the German Embassy in Rome.

They thought they had succeeded when Mrs. Hichborn consented to leave Wylie. They did not know he accompanied her and been agreed upon by the two before Mrs. Hichborn went with her mother.

After this Mrs. Hichborn travelled about Europe. She returned to this country the end of May with her mother and sister-in-law. She reached New York a few days before May 31, and got into communication with his wife from that city. His messages were carried by a stately, handsome son of a former Cabinet officer. Mrs. Wylie must not hear from him, but Mrs. Washington.

The upshot of the conference was his return to his family and their departure for Europe, which took place two days before Mrs. Hichborn returned to the country, which spurred the possibility of an unpleasant meeting. The Wylies travelled through England and the Continent and reassuring reports were sent back to Washington.

Told Wife of Decision.

Now comes the suppressed portion, which never been told before and which has logical sequence in the divorce suit.

MRS. HICHBORN, WHOSE HUSBAND ASKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Hichborn, a beautiful Washington woman, deserted her husband for Horace Wylie and went to Europe with him.

Wylie did not need the six months Mrs. Hichborn had granted for his trial reconciliation. Four months were enough to convince him that he could not be lured by his family ties. In September, finding his longing for Mrs. Hichborn had grown, he returned to this country with the determination to end the scandal.

He told his wife of his decision, and informed her that he would make ample provision for her, so that if she chose to sue for divorce we could not be worried about the financial end. He reached New York in the end of September with his seven-year-old son Andrew, whom he put at Lawrenceville School.

The courtship was conducted by mail.

LOTS OF SOFT, FLUFFY, LUSTROUS HAIR AND NEVER ANY DANDRUFF.

You can double the beauty of your hair in ten minutes with a little Danderine

When you see a head of heavy hair, that glistens with the sheen and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, you can at once conclude that this man or woman is using Danderine because nothing else accomplishes so much for the hair.

Just one application of Knowlton's Danderine will double the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately destroys and dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a nervousness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If you hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, don't hesitate, but get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now? A 25 cent bottle will truly amaze you.

LIGHT VOTE IS CAST IN BOSTON ELECTION

Hyde Park voted as a part of Boston a woman, Mrs. Kathleen E. Riggen, cast for the first time to-day in a city election that started under disagreeable, slushy conditions. The leaders worked hard to bring out the vote, which became more active as sunshine broke through the clouds.

The school board fight brought feminine voters out, especially in Hyde Park. There

With only a school board and City Council victory at stake, the polling fell off, as was expected, from the normal vote.

Ward 8, which is a good sample of election activity, was actually calm. Even the Hendricks Club was closed and locked at 10:30. Representative Martin M. Lomasney, "Czar of Ward 8," who never left his headquarters the day Mayor Fitzgerald was elected, two years ago, was not in his little back room at the Hendricks Club. It was said he would get reports at the State House during the day.

Maynard Sure of Winning.

"Joe" Maynard, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, put in much of the day in precinct 3, Ward 8. He said:

"Nothing to it. We will elect the straight Democratic tickets for school board and City Council. But we will elect the school board ticket easier. Ward 8 is casting 50 to 60 per cent. of its total vote. Voting is light on account of the weather."

At Precinct 2, Ward 8, 148 votes were cast up to 10:30 out of a total of 550, with no women voting up to that hour.

Precinct 4 showed 120 votes cast out of a total of 600, with three women. Precinct 5, where Maynard was polling 160 out of 600, with three women having voted up to 10:30.

The first vote cast in Hyde Park to-day at the first election date that it became Ward 26 of Boston was cast by Mrs. Riggen. She was not only the first woman to vote to-day, but she was also the first voter, masculine or feminine, and this was also the first time she ever voted.

The Hyde Park polls opened to-day under pettiest auspices if they ever did. The normal women vote for school board under the old town regime was from fifteen to thirty. Now the Woman's Progressive League of Hyde Park, of which Mrs. Riggen is founder and first president, has 210 members, every one of whom was pledged to cast her ballot at this election. During the morning hours it looked as though there would be more women voting there than men.

The Woman's Progressive League is for the Democratic candidates for the school board—Shehan and Merritt. Mrs. Rigren's husband, John A. Riggen, is a member of the Democratic State Committee. Mr. Riggen naturally approves of the league, since it means over 200 votes in Hyde Park for his candidates.

Mr. and Mrs. Riggen walked from their home at No. 128 West street to the town polling place in Waverley Hall, on West River street, half a mile distant. They have an automobile, but Mrs. Riggen said she would not bring the car out in the slush. She preferred to walk, anyhow, to cast her first ballot. Well protected from the weather, she tramped along with her husband early enough to arrive at the polling place before 6 o'clock.

Ab-ut fifty men were already lined up to cast their ballots the minute the polls opened and got to their work. But, when Mr. and Mrs. Riggen appeared, it was apparent to all that they had come early so Mrs. Riggen could have the honor.

Early voters are nothing if not orderly in Hyde Park and the men quickly made place at the head of the line for Mrs. Riggen. Mrs. Riggen walked in, received a ballot, marked it, quickly, then, as she walked out, followed by Mr. R. gen who had done the same. On r. Riggen could make a few more marks on his ball t, Massachusetts ceased having adopted suffrage yet, except on school board voting.

Roused Women to Vote.

When Mr. and Mrs. Riggen tramped back home through the slush with Mrs. Riggen feeling particularly pleased at her first voting.

When Hyde Park voted annexation, Mrs. Riggen thought that the women ought to become more active in school board matters. She called a meeting of twenty-five women friends at her home. The Woman's Progressive League of Hyde Park was organized. Just before State election a meeting was held in French's Opera House to boom the league. The meeting was such a whirl of success that 185 women joined in the next ten days, making a total voting membership of 210.

Mrs. Riggen has two boys in school, one fourteen years and the other twelve. She is prominent in women's club and social life and is a member of several Hyde Park organizations.

The voting in Ward 17, the home of Walter Ballantine, candidate for the Council, was very light. Early in the day Mrs. Susan FitzGerald, in a big touring car and accompanied by a number of "workers," paid a visit to the various precincts in the ward. On the automobile was a big yellow banner inscribed, "Vote for Mrs. Susan FitzGerald for School Committee."

Mrs. Fitzgerald in Auto.

She spoke to several men from the auto as they were entering the polling places and told them not to forget her. "We are with you, they shouted back.

The vote cast at 10:15 in the nine precincts was as follows: Precinct 1, 110; Precinct 3, 116; Precinct 4, 203; Precinct 5, 120; Precinct 8, 130; Precinct 7, 130; Precinct 8, 140 and Precinct 9, 180.

The Mercury wing cap is shown in the upper picture. Below on the right is a fetching theatre cap, and on the left the ever-becoming Quaker bonnet.

THREE NEW HATS JUST FROM PARIS

Just because it is the middle of the Winter, and very very cold, does not mean that it is not a good time to think about hats. Hats are always interesting, and it is always a good time to buy a hat.

So here are three new hats just over from Paris on the last steamer. There is the Mercury wing cap, which is going to be popular, because it fits close, and women have just been finding out this Winter what a comfort it is to have a hat that really fits the head.

This Mercurial affair is also good, because it conforms to the simple hair dressing now in vogue.

The model from Paris was made of grebe, a mottly blended tints of brown and white, and looks not unlike our little friend, the Ring Pheasant in "Cantieer."

Theatre caps have been very much the rage this Winter, but we have seen so many of the little gold and lace mob caps, that it is a relief to see something new. The cap in the picture is of gold lace, with a band of fur, and ribbon roses.

The point of gold lace falling over the shoulder is not only graceful, but has all the possibilities of a Spanish mantilla, is not only graceful, but has all the possibilities of a Spanish mantilla as an accessory of coyness.

Quite different are the Quakers are to the coming and going of styles and fads, their ever prevailing fashions have furnished us many a graceful model, and we keep returning to their quaint simplicity as a relief from the elaborate vanities that come across the water.

The little Quaker hat probably owes its revival to the popularity of a Quaker country in New York just now. It is of lace with a bandeaux of flowers, and with black velvet strings tying under the chin.

What We Need Is a REAL Merchants' Association,

one that can eliminate Politicians and their employers, the Public Service Corporations; also eliminate any so-called merchant who may pay a large portion of the price of goods sold to the city or state to the men who give orders and make contracts, one that will not be controlled by a few Bosses who are always looking for honors, or contracts, and enjoy elegant committee dinners weekly that the modest members pay for, one that will aid in the protection of the public as well as themselves, from the "Fake" advertising of Clothing, Furs, Boots and Shoes, etc., by men using names other than their own, or no names at all, who are arrested in N. Y. and other places for the same deception and fraud which is practiced in Boston with impunity.

What we need is a REAL Merchants' Association — something we have never had since merchants of the old school conducted business upon a basis of integrity.

PACKERS FIXED PRICES AT HOME

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—That the Chicago packers, after Judge Grosscup's injunction restraining them from continuing to pool, held their meetings at the homes of members of the pool instead of in the downtown offices, but transacted the same business exactly, was the testimony of Jerome H. Pratt, former assistant manager of Armour & Company's dressed meat department, in the trial of the ten Chicago packers charged with criminal violation of the Sherman law.

A letter, showing alleged collusion between Swift & Company and Armour & Company in bidding for the annual meat contract for the Old Soldiers' Home at Togus, Me., November 6, 1905, was introduced in evidence by the government.

The letter was received by Mr. Pratt and was signed with the initials F. A. F., which Pratt said indicated it was written by Francis A. Fowler, one of the defendants in the case and head of the dressed meat department of Swift & Company.

The letter read:

"J. H. P.: Please bid over beef 7¾, mutton 8½, Togus Home. You have had for a year. F. A. F."

Mr. Pratt was asked:

"Did you make any use of the National Packing Company figures?"

"Yes, we kept track of their shipments to see that they did not exceed their percentage to different points," replied Mr. Pratt.

The witness said he often spoke to Mr. Meeker about the National Packing Company's overshipping into certain markets.

Armour Listed First.

Mr. Pratt said the order in which the margins were entered in the weekly reports was Armour, first; National Company, second; Morris third, and Swift last. He said the word "margin" as used signified the advance price to be charged.

One of the letters related to shipments to Catskill, N. Y., and bore a notation in pencil reading:

"Is this in our neutral territory?"

This notation, the witness said, was in the handwriting of Thomas J. Combs.

Pratt said his understanding of "neutral" territory was territory in which two or more packers shipped to the same point.

Profit and loss after the issue of J. de Grosscup's injunction in 1902 restraining the packers from continuing to pool, the packers held their meetings to fix prices and apportion business at the homes of the members.

"Was there any particular difference in the meetings held at members' homes and those held down town?"

"No."

"I got no figures and instructions for a while in 1902 when the meetings were being held at the members' homes," said the witness. "That was during the period of the Grosscup injunction. In 1903 and thereafter I got my figures and instructions from Arthur Meeker."

"In addition to these memoranda did you receive anything else from Mr. Meeker in regard to the business of Armour & Company?"

Memos From Meeker.

"Yes, I received numerous memoranda from Mr. Meeker at different times."

"Did you receive anything from him referring to the shipments and margins of the National Packing Company?"

"Yes, I received one memorandum each week."

"What became of these statements?"

"They were destroyed. They contained the names of cities in territory 'A' showing the shipments made to each point, together with the cost of profit to be charged.

"Did you talk with Mr. Meeker about the contents of those statements?"

"I talked with him on Wednesday in the office of Armour & Company in 19 3 and he referred to me the memorandum of the date, but I already knew what they were. He said the first showing what the National Packing Company was doing."

This witness said that in the peri d between 1905 and 1907 each member of the packers' combination knew the percentage of shipments and profit margins of every other member. The information was set out on sheets each week, and the figures were frequently discussed by the managers of the different meat department of the different companies.

CIRCULAR STAIRWAY FALL MAY KILL MAN

Slipping on a frost-covered girder on the sixth floor of the Hotel Vendome Alexander M. Dickie, an iron worker, living at No. 1 Dudley street, fell several feet through the space where the stairs circle. He is at the City Hospital, facing death from internal injuries.

THREE NEW HATS SAVE PATROLMAN FROM DROWNING

Patrolman James McCreadie of the Lagrange street police station narrowly escaped being drowned, early to-day, when he slipped and fell into an elevator well, filled with water, at the rear of Childs's restaurant at No. 603 Washington street.

Weighted down by his rubber boots and coat, McCreadie was unable to swim, and was sinking for the second time when Patrolman Albert Calder of the same station jumped into the water after him. Calder managed to get a grip on McCreadie and they both kept afloat until they were dragged from the well by persons who had heard their cries for assistance.

One of the large water pipes at the rear of the restaurant had burst from the cold and the escaping water poured into the elevator well. The Water Department was notified and an emergency crew hurriedly to repair the break. When the crew arrived there was nearly fifteen feet of water in the well.

The restaurant is on McCreadie's route and Sergeant William Flynn told him to get a report of the damage caused by the water. It was while getting this report that McCreadie slipped on a piece of ice and fell into the water.

For Chilblains, Frost-Bites, and All Sore Feet

Many persons dread the approach of winter on account of chilblains and frostbites which cause a soreness and itching at times almost unbearable, frequently to a nervous condition. To those thus afflicted the following treatment will be welcome information, as it gives immediate relief and soon cures. "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water (not hot). Soak the feet in this for fifteen minutes. Repeat this for several nights until the trouble disappears."

The action of Calocide compound for all ailments is really remarkable. By its use corns and callouses can be peeled right off. Sweaty, smelly feet and tender, aching feet need but a few applications. Bunions get relief instantly. Any druggist has it in stock or will get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is usually sufficient to put the worst feet in fine condition.

ELECTRIC DIVES INTO OPEN DRAW

Twenty-one persons narrowly escaped being drowned early to-day when a Boston bound Washington avenue car of the Bay State Street Railway Company crashed through the guard gates of the New Charlestown drawbridge and hung suspended over the channel.

The front end of the car was wrecked and the passengers were thrown into a panic. They rushed for the rear door of the car and scrambled out into the street, followed by Motorman John Wedge and Conductor Arthur Warren. Nobody was injured.

Wedge said he did not see the lights which indicated that the draw was open. A test opening of the draw was being made on account of the storm.

GET FAT AT OUR EXPENSE

50c BOX NEW DISCOVERY MAILED FREE

An Invitation to Test Free a Simple Home Treatment for Putting on Flesh

If You Are as Thin as a Rail and Look Like a Scarecrow, Invest gate This New Discovery, Which Has Made 100,000 Thin Men and Women Plump and Attractive

The slimmest, scrawniest man or woman can now add solid, natural plump—yes, actually fat, and all the attractive curves of perfect health, which, in by a simple, harmless, home treatment, which any one can take in private and in a few days guarantee a success or no pay.

To be thin and bony is unnatural, unhealthy and unpleasant.

Thin folks are sneered at and bored at; they get easily sick and don't stay well long. Consumption is the most fatal disease, and it's the thin people that nearly all the cases comes from poor food assimilation. Fat folks are seldom sick enough to die—they have too much reserve strength to draw on. Even when consumption does get them, the worst they get, generally, is a few months in the sanitarium and a trip to Europe, and then the ultimate world still gets them in the normal proportion.

Scientific men have long known that the discovery was coming, but the secret of assimilation could be had only through the most accurate chemical analysis of vitalizing elements, perfectly balanced to the needs of each individual, composed of the chemical joins of fresh meat, fruit and nature juices, and the constituents of bone and muscle, and the digestive principles of known worth in aiding the assimilation of food.

While this new discovery is more of the nature of a food than a medicine, it has been proved to put on pure fat in hardly tables form. A week's supply can easily be carried in the vest pocket.

Since the discovery of this secret, over one hundred thousand thin men and women have been benefited by its use, and many have reported a gain of from 10 to 25 pounds in a few weeks' time. Just one box of this wonderful flesh creator is all that is usually required to show the most astonishing, delightful and rapid recovery from wasting disease.

The eminent Dr. Mascarenhas, Ph.D.,F.C.S., says: "Sargol contains elements well calculated to increase weight. It is free from harmful or dangerous drugs."

Dr. Armand M. D., Sc. D., reports: "Sargol is in every respect a superior preparation, safe and reliable, and will prove a success or no benefit will follow taking."

Hundreds and hundreds of men and women—thin folks, too—have written us that they have put on pounds under weight—write that they are literally astonished at the quick, unmistakable gain in weight, gain in health, gain in muscle, nerve force and vitality.

"Seems too good to be true," they write. Well, the test is free, and the test will tell. 500 fifty-cent boxes of Sargol have been placed at the disposal of the readers of this paper. You can have one by writing the Sargol Co.

This free test has started thousands of men and women on the road to health and beauty.

The business extending throughout the world has been built up entirely by users telling their several business points.

Any thin, scrawny, flat-chested woman, without form or curves, or any sickly-shanked cadaverous man, can have a free test package and start gaining ten days before the rush of the treatment without the risk of a penny.

Any reader who is fat, fifteen or even thirty pounds below normal weight can prove the truth of every statement made by simply writing the Sargol Co., 48-M Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., for a free test package, and enclosing 10c in stamps to help pay postage and packing. Just send name and address plainly and write for a free test package. HEARST PLEDGES AID TO DEMOCRATS

Calls for Harmony in Address at Jackson Day Banquet at Washington.

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Not within the memory of any Democrat now living has there been so enthusiastic a gathering of the leaders of the party as was assembled at the Raleigh, almost every great leader of the party attended. Governors, Senators and men prominent in the Nation's affairs sat side by side as did at the hundreds of small tables and wildly cheered at the telling points made in the speeches and at the notable men of the party as they entered the brilliantly decorated banquet hall.

The speeches were for the most part short and pointed and all breathed the spirit of confidence that seems to fire the air. One of the most notable of the incidents of the affair was the arrival of William Randolph Hearst, who sped from the West on a special train for the purpose of speaking at the dinner.

When Mr. Hearst entered the ball his path was obstructed by dozens of Democrats who rose to congratulate him, and the applause when he took his seat was renewed and continuous. Mr. Bryan leading the demonstration. Mr. Hearst was immediately surrounded by a group of the leaders of the party, who warmly shook hands with him. When in his speech he pledged every force and every resource at his command to the man who is to lead the Democratic party to victory next year, the applause was deafening.

Applause for Hearst.

Again when he characterized Roosevelt as playing Harlequin to Root's Columbine and said that Roosevelt carried not a big stick, but a pinwheel, there was a round of applause that was joined in by every man in the room.

Mr. Hearst spoke as follows:

To be brief, the duty of a Democrat, as I see it, is first to realize that he himself is a Democrat in the true sense of the word; second, to make sure that his party is the exponent of genuine democratic principles, and finally to do his utmost to forestall that party of genuine democracy in control of government in order that all the people may have the benefit of equal rights, justice and the equal opportunities which are democracy.

Democracy is not a matter of party name. It is a matter of principle. It is more even than that—it is a matter of mental process. Your democracy, if it is real, cannot be changed like your hat to conform to the latest fashion.

It cannot be worn long or short like your hair, to suit the seasons. Your democracy is an essential machinery that you cannot materially modify.

You either think as a Democrat or you think as a federalist. You either believe in Democratic principles or you believe in their opposite. If you do believe in Democratic principles you recognize them wherever you find them and you follow them wherever they lead.

What Democracy Means.

Democracy means what the name implies—a system of government in which the powers of government are confided to the people.

Democracy means confidence in the people, belief in the virtue and in the wisdom of the people, conviction that the whole people can govern themselves better than any clique, or class or faction, or section can govern them or govern for them.

The best Democratic policy is the policy that tends to secure to the greatest power in the hands of the people, and the man who will carry out policy is the best Democrat.

Calling a man a doctor does not make him a doctor, and calling a man a Democrat does not make him a Democrat. There are great many people in the Democratic party who are not Democrats and who do not belong to the Democratic party, and there are a great many people in the Republican party who are Democrats, and who DO belong in the Democratic party.

The Greatest Democrats.

When a progressive Republican has progressed far enough he has progressed out of the Republican party into the Democratic party, and the sooner he realizes where he belongs and cuts loose and joins the right party the better it will be for him and for the country.

The greatest Democrats of our history were Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Abraham Lincoln.

It does not matter what party name their followers or Republican they have represented the cause of the people, they believed in popular rights and liberties, they labored for equal justice and equal opportunities.

Therefore they were Democrats and therefore they were justly revered as Democrats.

We Democrats are celebrating Jackson Day to-night, not be aus- Jackson was a party man or because he was a Democratic President (there have been many such), but because he was so consistent and conspicuous a champion of the people, so able, so strong and so uplifting a advocate of true Democratic principles.

Jackson Not a Blind Follower.

Jackson was not a blind follower of party name.

He abandoned the party which Jefferson had founded when the party abandoned the principles of Jefferson.

His republicanism the Republican party when that party became the party of privilege and paternalism, of protection and plunder. He followed the principles into the new Democratic party and in a campaign of principle for popular rights led that party to overwhelming victory.

The value of this celebration of Jackson Day depends upon our just appreciation of the man, our accurate understanding of the principle for which he fought.

Its importance lies largely in the fact that the conditions which confronted the Democratic party in Jackson's time are almost identical with the conditions which confront the Democratic party to-day.

Lincoln revived the Republican which Jefferson had founded and revived it upon the principles which Jefferson had promulgated.

But the Republican party has again become the party of privilege and paternalism, of protection and plunder.

The opportunity of the Democratic party to-day is the same as was the opportunity of the Democratic party in Jackson's day, and the same absolute devotion to the cause of the people will bring it the same inspiring and enduring success.

I have always been a devoted Democrat as I understand the meaning of the word.

I am even always been a sincere believer in the principles of Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln.

I have advocated and supported whatever measures would repose in full power of government in the hands of the people and I have not advocated some of them some of the time, but all of the time.

Thus I have endeavored to perform my first duty as a Democrat and be a Democrat not in name only, but in principle as well.

I am here to-night because I am a Democrat through principle and because I believe that the Democratic party has become and will continue to be the exponent of the principles which I have always followed and for which I have always fought.

My only desire is now to perform my second duty as a Democrat and do my best to help true Democrats control the party in the interest of true Democracy.

My determination is then to perform no further duty as a Democrat and support the Democratic party and true Democratic principles with every resource I can command.

Democracy to Aid Country.

I take this stand, not merely for party reasons, but for patriotic reasons; not merely for the interests of democracy, but in the interests of the whole country. I believe that our most vital interests will be considered and our most serious problem solved solved by placing the forces of government in the hands of genuine democracy which will protect the rights of every citizen, secure equal and exact justice for all, and promote the fullest liberty and opportunity with the law for rich and poor alike.

This coming election and many elections to follow will be decided by the independent progressive voters of this country and the great body of intelligent citizens will realize that they can find the best expression of their faith in a Democratic party which has the men here and the courage to be truly Democratic.

Assuredly these progressive citizens will not follow Mr. Taft in the Republican party, for Mr. Taft is either opposed to their ideals or else indifferent to them or else incapable of comprehending them.

Positively the progressives will not be able to support Mr. La Follette in the Republican party, for Mr. La Follette belongs in the Democratic party and will never be nominated for the presidency by the Republican party.

Roosevelt a "Harlequin."

Surely these genuine progressives will not fail to behind Mr. Roosevelt, who, when President, sacrificed every progressive principle for his own advantage and on every occasion basely betrayed the interests of the people for the sordid support of some criminal trusts.

To support Roosevelt would make the whole progressive movement ridiculous.

The man is a very harlequin of politics, capering forward and backward and sidewise over every conflicting quarter of the political stage, masked as to his real opinion and intention, attired in a tinsel patchwork of opposing principles, carrying not a big stick, but a slap-stick with which to make much noise and do no service, appearing unexpectedly through every trap door of opportunism and disappearing acrobatically through every open window of time-saving expediency.

With Roosevelt as Harlequin and Root as Columbine, with Rockefeller as Clown and Morgan as Pantaloon, the whole progressive movement would become a roaring Christmas pantomime, culminating in a spectacular transformation scene, where prosperity would again revolve in Wall Street would once more save the country, in order to divide it satisfactorily between themselves.—William Randolph Hearst, in speech at Jackson Day banquet in Washington.

ARIZONA GIVES HEARST PRAISE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—United States Senator-elect Henry F. Ashhurst, one of the two newly elected Senators of Arizona, passed through here on his way to Arizona. The Senator-elect, who is thirty-six years old, will be one of the youngest to enter the Senate, but he will go to Washington with the full confidence of his party and the majority of Arizona. He is filled with ideas and will, as the people of the new State predict, be an active part in the affairs of government.

"The Legislature of Arizona will convene some time in March and will elect Marcus A. Smith and me to the Senate," he said, "we having been chosen by the voters at the recent Arizona election.

"Arizona is very grateful to those states men of national fame who publicly and especially gratefully to William Randolph Hearst, and, indeed, it must have been gratifying to him, upon reading every constitution, to find incorporated therein so many of those progressive principles of which he was the powerful aid. I might add, pioneer advocate—such as the initiative, referendum and recall of all judicial decisions by the people. Indeed, I believe the system of choosing United States Senators by direct vote of the people."

Senator Ashhurst was a speaker at the recent banquet to Mr. Hearst in San Francisco and regarding the occasion he said:

"Men prominent in the affairs of San Francisco declared the banquet given Mr. Hearst was by all odds the most remarkable demonstration of gratitude as well esteem ever given in that city."

MORE SUPPORT FOR FOSS BOOM

The supporters of the campaign of Governor Foss for the Democratic Presidential nomination, besides being gratified by the support given the boom by party leaders now in Washington, pointed to-day to the additional endorsement given by the Cincinnati Enquirer.

That newspaper, printed in the home city of President Taft, contains an article highly praising Governor Foss and setting forth his qualifications for the Presidency in glowing terms. The supporters of Governor Foss point to this editorial tribute as a further sign of the increasing national character of the suggestion that he be the party standard bearer in the next Presidential campaign.

Mayor Fitzgerald, who is in Washington, is quoted to-day in dispatches from the capital as saying:

"I have talked with the National Committeemen from all the New England States, with Governor Plaisted of Maine, with Mr. Bryan, Norman E. Mack and Charles F. Murphy of New York. I called the attention of Mr. Mack and Mr. Murphy to the desirability of having the New England States and New York stand together. We have about 150 delegates from New England, and why should we not line up together from these States? I called attention to the fact that Governor Foss was well thought of. They said they liked his progressive ways and felt confidence in him because he was a sound and successful business man.

"Of course, Mr. Bryan would not commit himself, but he said he had recognized what an increasing Governor Foss had made as Governor of Massachusetts. Roger Sullivan, National Committeeman from Illinois, also spoke in high terms of the Governor.

SANG TOGETHER NOW WILL WED

The announcement by Mrs. Josephine Louise Giddings of West Newton street of the engagement of her niece, Miss Edith Josephine Ellis, to Joseph Goudreault of Haverhill, brings to light the pretty romance of a church choir.

For Miss Ellis and Mr. Goudreault were members of the quartet of the North Congregational Church of Haverhill, the most fashionable church in that city, and it was there that they first became acquainted.

Mr. Goudreault took pleasure in finding the proper hymn for the pretty soprano at his side. She in turn, liked to have him. When the hymn was sung and they sat down, out of sight of the audience behind the curtained rail, she took occasion to thank him. That started the ball rolling conversation.

This happened so often that people began to take notice, and then came the announcement of the engagement.

The bridegroom, a pretty and talented girl, has for the past two years been engaged as soprano in North Church, Haverhill, where for some time longer Mr. Goudreault has been tenor soloist.

Miss Ellis was instructor of music at the Bolsover Female Seminary, and last Fall became teacher of music at Howard Seminary at Bridgewater, where she is now. She has sung considerably in light operatic work, and is a number of local theatricals and comic operas.

SEND COSSACKS INTO MONGOLIA

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 9.—Russia today began the transportation of Cossacks into Mongolia, the official explanation being that troops are needed ther to preserve order.

Since the secession of Mongolia and Chinese Turkestan from the Chinese Empire on December 29, which marked the beginning of the partition of China, Russia has been taking secret but active steps to forward formal annexation.

LEAP YEAR! NOW FOR THAT PRIZE

Girls, have you popped the question?

There's more than one reason why you should. Besides, you know this is none other than Nineteen Hundred and Woman's Year.

No use talking, the girls are going to have their innings, these coming 357 days —nine days having already been struck off the Leap Year Opportunity Calendar. This is the every-fourth-year occasion when a woman can really will when she wills, and if she wants to annex a husband why, who's going to say her nay?

Not Mr. Mere Man, at any rate. That is, provided he hasn't already got a wife to prevent his assenting to that Leap Year proposal.

Doubtless some of you girls have already proposed. Others of you may just be making up your minds, fearful of taking a chance, lest young Mr. Ardent Wooer throw a fit of displeasure. But don't fear; it's all coming out right in the end. Just be courageous, girls.

You May Win the Prize.

Now here is the big point and the reason why you should pop the question to him all the more quickly:

The AMERICAN is offering a cash prize of $25 to the first couple engaged or married this year, who will confess that the girl in the case took advantage of Leap Year and proposed.

Easy, isn't it? Really, there are no hard conditions to fulfill. Just go ahead and spring the question, and the prize can be yours. Or, maybe, it is already yours, only that you have failed to come forward and claim it. Well, don't be bashful. The Leap Year Editor has the money ready.

The money might come in handy, say for a nice ring, or say, a start on the furniture. It would pave the road for a smooth start on life's journey together. It would do lots of things, and, don't you know, it's so easy when you come to think of it.

Under all the laws of courtship, this is the one year in every four where a woman can hold her sweetheart by the lapel and propose.

"John, dear, I have loved you long and well. Will you be mine?"

Or it might run thusly:

"John, I like your looks. Will you have me?"

Faint Heart Never Won.

And if John is at all Leap-pearish—if he has the right stuff in his make-up, why, there's nothing to it but success—and don't forget that cash prize of this Proposal Contest.

It would be interesting to know what the girls are going to do about it. Leap Year is with us. There's no denying that. So to help matters and bring out interesting facts, the AMERICAN makes its cash prize offer—$25 to the first engaged or married couple of this year who come forward and say that the engagement or marriage is the result of a Leap Year proposal by the lady in the case.

All the couple must do will be to furnish names, addresses and photographs and satisfy the Leap Year Editor that it is a bonafide Leap Year proposal.

And remember, girls, that faint heart never won brave man—In Nineteen Hundred and Leap Year!

LIFE PATROL SIGNAL SAVES SHIP IN STORM

CHATHAM, Jan. 9.—A big coal steamer in ballast, bound South, supposed to be the Transportation Company's fleet, which left Boston for Newport News, narrowly missed going ashore on Orleans Beach. A heavy snow squall had set in. John Doane of the Orleans Life Saving Station saw the masthead lights of the steamer heading directly for the South watchhouse on the beach. He burned a costou signal to warn the craft and in half a minute burned a second. The steamer burned an answering signal and had turned so as to head nearly northward, being then well inside the Orleans bar. Doane lighted another torch signal and the big craft was forced ahead off shore and cleared the bar.

SNOWSTORM DANCE AT CLUB ASSEMBLY

A snowstorm dance was the feature of the second assembly of the Abbatored Club at the Hotel Somerset. While the orchestra mimicked the wail of the wind and the whirr of the drifting snow, there descended from the balconies clouds of fine white confetti and soft bits of cotton. A shaded light effectively completed the illusion. Some 250 guests were present, among them the representatives of some of the city's most prominent families.

Supper was served in the dining hall on the same floor with the ball room.

It was the most successful year in the history of the association. The total membership is 1240.

MRS. DELAND, WHO IS CANDIDATE AT DEDHAM ELECTION

MARGARET DELAND.

Mrs. Deland is known not only by her books, but also by her famous jonquil salcs. Photograph by Notman.

Mrs. Margaret Deland, the author, is among the candidates for office at the coming town election in Dedham. She is making a campaign for one of the three public library trusteeships, which is one of the several lively contests in progress.

The members of the old Board of Selectmen, Lester A. Newcomb, Richard A. Mandeville and John E. Fisher, are out for re-election. They are opposed by School Committeeman and Library Trustee Francis W. Lyons, former Assessor Henry Bingham, former Moderator George Granville Darling and Ralph P. Chever of Endicott, who announces he will run on a business platform.

For the assessorship vacancy caused by the retirement of Representative Frederic J. Gready, the aspirants include James H. Chisell, Democratic candidate for the House in 1910, Judge F. Shaine, president of the Dedham Citizens' Association, J. Henry Nay, president of the East Dedham Business Improvement Association, and Overseer of the Poor Joseph W. Wilson. Attorney John F. Finn and Herman W. Richter, a retired business man of Oakdale.

PROPOSED LAW HITS DIVORCEES

A bill to require divorced people wishing to remarry to present copies of their divorce certificates in applying for marriage licenses, has been drafted by Representative William S. Duncan of Clinton.

Under this the issuance of a marriage license by city and town clerks will be made dependent in the case of divorced parties of their submitting such a copy. It shall also be the duty of the city and town clerk to paste this record on the license in such a manner that it can not be detached, and this is the document which the anxious groom will have to present to the officiating clergyman.

The purpose of this bill is not only to discourage divorce as far as possible, but also to save clergymen who otherwise might innocently perform a marriage and only become cognizant of the real facts after they had tied the knot.

It is true that on the marriage license it is set forth, as required, that the party has been divorced, but as to the guilt of the party nothing is shown, and verbal inquiries have been a failure.

Amending this certified copy and making it a part of the license makes it impossible for a minister to say he did not understand who the guilty party was, and it also acts as a safeguard.

"The matter has been brought to me by various ministers, who felt that they would like to have something done," said Mr. Duncan. "It was hard to make the suggestions workable.

"If a minister wants to marry a divorced couple, even though it is the guilty party who is seeking marriage, there is no law at least now, which can be invoked.

"Several of them told me of cases where they had officiated at marriages and only learned the real facts days after the ceremony had been performed.

"I have thought that this asking for the annexing of a certified copy of the court decree will go far toward clearing up the situation. The court papers will show in each case who the guilty party was in the suit, and the establishment of that fact is as far as we can go.

300 AT BACHAUS PIANO RECITAL

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Wilhelm Bachaus, a new pianist for Boston, gave a concert at Jordan Hall yesterday afternoon. He is not unknown here by reputation. We are aware that he is popular in England and that they like him in Berlin and Vienna. He attracted an audience of about three hundred.

Bachaus is a very melancholy man with long poetic hair. He probably makes young girls believe that a secret sorrow is eating out his heart. As he plays he gazes pensively and gloomily skyward.

Wilhal he is a very talented pianist, a performer of great brilliancy. He is accustomed to larger halls than Jordan Hall, for he belabors the piano most unmercifully. Fortissimo to him means misfortune to the piano. He played the Beethoven C major sonata in a most distinguished manner and if he can play loudly he can also play tenderly and sympathetically.

The program began with the three B's, Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms, and continued through Chopin and Liszt. The incredibly difficult Brahms variations upon a theme by Paganini was very satisfactorily disposed of. Bachaus knows and loves his Chopin, but it seemed to me that his talents were best suited by the brilliant Liszt.

ZENATELLO PLAYS TITLE ROLE FOR FIRST TIME IN FAUST

"Faust" was repeated at the Opera House last night with the same cast as at the first performance, save that Zenatello appeared in the title role for the first time.

When Hammerstein had Zenatello he was an ordinary Italian tenor capable of pealing his way through Radames in "Aida" and similar roles, but knowing nothing outside the standard Italian repertory.

He is rapidly becoming in Boston a most serviceable and versatile artist. We often hear of dramatic tenors starting from lyric tenors, but a dramatic tenor who turns into a lyric artist is very rare.

Zenatello is one. He is steadily learning new roles, and appreciating the art of singing as he never did before. The same is to who sings Otello, Manrico and Radames is to-day able to appear as Cavaradossi in "Tosca," Faust and Don Jose in "Carmen" with equal success.

Zenatello made an admirable Faust last evening. Brooks repeated her Margu-rite, which is a thoroughly pleasing impersonation, and Rothier was quite seen as Mephistopheles.

Simon Blanchart was given a chance to sing Valentine. Charles Strony, one of the assistant conductors, appeared on the conductor's stand and led a very creditable performance.

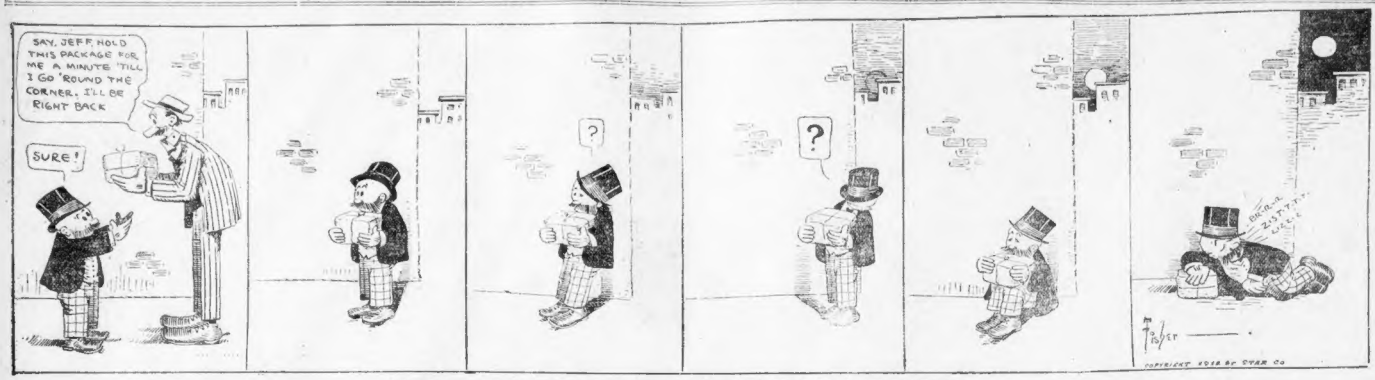
BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

FAMOUS RUNNER MAY BE BARRED FROM U. S. OLYMPIC TEAM

If Somebody Doesn't Rescue Jeff Soon He'll Starve to Death — By "Bud" Fisher



THE FAMOUS MUTT AND JEFF CARTOONS ARE A REGULAR FEATURE OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN.

METS MAY ADD RUNNING RACES

With the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Driving Club at the Charles River clubhouse to-morrow night will come up the question of in the future making a portion of the matinee race card for running events, and the using of a distance flag in the light harness horse classes.

The newly constructed half-mile track at the speedway has brought forth the idea of running races. Members of the Country, Myopia, and other local hunt and riding clubs, all devotees of the runners, have expressed the desire in joining the Metropolitan if they will be given the privilege of sandwiching running races in the afternoon matinee events, the winners to receive cups and ribbons, the same as the trotters and pacers have in seasons past.

Fully fifty members of these clubs will be active in joining, among the number being Miss Eleonora Sears, Miss Dorothy Forbes and the Foss twin sisters.

From what can be learned the members of the Metropolitan will vote in altering the constitution of the club in amending the law permitting running races with those for trotters and pacers. With the runners going more than four furlongs the start can be on the straight-away speedway, finishing the race around the half-mile. It should prove very attractive to the sport-loving public.

The adopting of a distance flag if brought up through so many of the drivers of trotters and racers laying aside the reins and laying them up so much as to interfere to go more than a quarter of a mile while the rest of the field is fighting it out clear to the wire. After having only jogged a heat it often happens the horse is fresh enough to then defeat the other horses that have been hard driven in the first of the race.

GREAT INTEREST IN BOUTS AT WORCESTER

A great deal of interest is being manifested in the bouts of the Lake Shore A. A., which take place Thursday night. The card is an excellent one and is sure to cause a goodly number of sporting enthusiasts. The Worcester Club can accommodate 2,500 people, so it can readily be seen that there will be plenty of room for everybody. Three star bouts are down on the card. Honey Mellody is slated to meet Jeff Doherty, Young McDonough clashes with George Alger, while "Irish Paddy" Calahan is booked to swap wallops with Tommy Rawson.

Yale will, however, send its varsity and freshman eights to the American Henley regatta at Philadelphia in May. Yale will this year omit its races with the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton and Cornell.

MAY BAR RYAN ON U. S. TEAMS

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—It is questionable whether Mike Ryan, the Marathon runner of the Irish-American A. C., will be eligible to represent this country in the Stockholm Olympia this year even if he is selected by the Olympic Team Committee.

Ryan is one of the best amateur runners in America from fifteen miles to the Marathon distance. Two years ago he won a Canadian Marathon run, and as a reward he was given free transportation and expenses with the proviso that he compete for the Spectator A. C., a Canadian organization in the English Marathon, which was held in London last Fall.

Ryan wore the colors of the Spectator A. C. in the English Marathon run and finished third. Although Ryan ran under the colors of a Canuck Club he was and still is a member of the Irish-American A. C.

The question now arises will the committees of other countries object to Ryan competing for Uncle Sam if he is selected. According to the rules only a citizen can compete for the country he wishes to represent.

Baseball Notes

President Ward is against playing baseball on Sunday and the Pilgrims will not take part in any Sabbath day games if the new official of the South End Club can arrange with the other league managers.

Tom Gregg, the lanky Cleveland twirler, stepped four times against Big Ed Walsh at second and won every one of the games against the Chicago White Sox hoosiers.

Last year the Cubs battled to the very last ditch without one real reliable pitcher, but this season the Peerless Chase has his eye on several youngsters whom in exercise will develop into the finds of the year.

Walter Johnson, the Senator's reliable fire ball king, won more than twenty games in his team last year. How many games would Walter have won had he been pitching for Connie Mack or Detroit?

Only five of the eight teams in the American League changed managers since last October. Connie Mack, Hughey Jennings and Rhody Wallace are the only managers who have held their old berths, but the have a slight advantage over the new leaders in the fact that they know the ability of the veterans of the league.

Outfielder Perry of the Providence team has been transferred to the Detroit team to take the place of Outfielder Sailee Jones. Perry is expected to make good with the champions. He is a brainy ball player, and is exceptionally fast on the bases and covers a world of territory in the outfield.

Elmer Stricklett, the original spitball pitcher, recently decided to quit organized baseball because the former Brooklyn star pitcher is now a member of the Califor ia Athletics.

Manager McAleer has certainly started house-cleaning. He does not plan to take south more than thirty players, and of this number there will not be more than three extra outfielders. With Speaker, Lewis, Hooper and Hendricksen as the regulars McAleer does not plan to try out more than one or two others for positions in the outer garden.

Harry ("Slim") Sallee, the lanky left-hander who always has the greatest number of any time he is half way right, has gone into the pledge. Slim claims he have been on the water wagon for several months already. If this is so and he sticks to his resolution, the Rustlers will find a formidable obstacle every time they stack up against the Cardinals in 1912. Sallee is a fellow who has a lot of brains—differing in this respect from "Rube" Marquard and "Rube" Waddell. Heretofore he has been his own worst enemy.

Harry Davis and his Naps will be very busy during the Spring straining trip, for J. A. Barnard has arranged a busy schedule of exhibition games for Cleveland next Spring. The first team will play two dates in Mobile, four in New Orleans, one in Memphis, three in Indianapolis and two in Columbus. These games are scattered out from the middle of March until the opening of the American League season.

SPORTING BRIEFS

The University of Virginia has asked Manager George Brown to arrange a relay race for their team at the B. A. A. track meet. The athletic committee is considering the application.

Jesse Spidding, captain-elect of the Yale football team, is ill at his home in Chicago. While spending the holidays with his parents a severe case of tonsilitis developed. The illness was at first diagnosed as diphtheria.

J. T. Putnam of the Union Boat Club defeated H. Reed of the B. A. A. in a match in the squash racquet tournament. Putnam won the match, 15—10, 15—4, 15—18, 12—15, 15—13.

Junior and varsity races with the Naval Academy crews have been scheduled by Syracuse University. The races will be rowed on the Severn, May 18. Crew practice will begin here January 15, three weeks earlier than usual.

Davenport of Kansas City defeated Mason of Boston, 50 to 45, in the National Billiard League three-cushion match at the Imperial.

In the sixty-ninth game of the C class amateur billiard tourney at the Elite, Percival defeated Main 150 to 88. Wednesday evening Maio will play Fitzpatrick.

Dates for the intercollegiate fencing championship have been fixed for March 29 and 30 at New York, with preliminaries at West Point and Annapolis, March 23.

Ski runners of international fame will take part in the championships at Cary, Illinois, January 27 and 28, including Ingvald E. A. Jensen, w. Schanke, Asleph Swenson, Edward Anderson and Ole Bjerke.

The best wishes of the Boston sports are with Bart Sullivan, who has just been engaged as track team coach at Holy Cross. Watch the Worcester boys at the B. A. A. meet.

George Tuohey is trying to get Frank Golch to come here for one of his future shows. The champion is so retiring that he threatens to balk but the reports from Chicago say that he has half consented to come and if that is so with Tuohey on the job there is little left to do but print the announcement of his coming out again.

Jim Corbett is picking Al Palzer as the only real hopeful hope now in sight to wrest the title of champion from big Jack Johnson.

John Rudderham of Braintree has been engaged to train the athletes of the University of Illinois.

Herbert P. Lawless, the Harvard cross-country runner and former member of the long-distance relay team, will not be allowed to compete in any of the meets this Winter because of a poor scholastic record.

A return game between the Intercolonial hockey team and B. A. A. seven will be played January 18 at the Arena. When the teams met early in the season, the game resulted in a 3 to 3 tie.

The new ice rink at Yale has been opened for practice and a large number of players are taking advantage of the opportunity to do a little hockey work.

Harvard and the Tiger varsity clash to-night at New York and a battle which will rival the famous game of 1910 is looked for.

Colby College may lose the services of Harry S. Mellevitt of Alston, formerly of the Brighton High and Dartmouth College football and baseball teams. Mellevitt is now in business in Boston.

The members of the Dorchester High School football team meet this week to elect a football captain for the 1912 team. Harold Mullane is the leading candidate.

JOHNSON TELLS OF "FAKE" PRIZE

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Jim Corbett and a Chicago theatrical man offered me $100,000 to lay down to A. Kaufman after I had defeated Jim Jeffries. When I returned from Australia Jim Corbett and the same theatrical magnate visited me and offered me a substantial prize if I would consent to fake ten rounds with Corbett and assist in rebuilding Gentleman Jim's reputation."

These were the answers Jack Johnson made to-day to the signed statements of Jim Corbett to the effect that Johnson was the luckiest of the champions, that he was dodging fights with the best of the pressentday heavyweights, that he was a man of doubtful courage and that he was hogging it by demanding $50,000 for his end of a purse for the world's championship fight.

"I have stood for many attacks on my method of conducting my business," said Johnson, "but why should Jim Corbett attack me as he has? Take a look at his record. He only fought two square fights his contest with Charlie Mitchell was a sham fake. Mitchell laid down to him. He lost his fight with Tom Sharkey in New York on a foul to keep from being beaten in a more decisive way. And last but not least The Corbett venture with Fitzsimmons and the boxing game out of commission in New York for a long time."

TWO BOXING PERMITS FOR BROCKTON CLUBS

BROCKTON, Jan. 9. — The Aldermen have granted permits to two boxing clubs to give public sparring exhibitions, this action being the first time in the history of the city that such action has been taken. The Siwa City A. C., of which Captain Benjamin Chase is president and Frank Ferris secretary, first applied for permission to conduct bouts and the permit was granted on motion of Alderman Burbank, all except Alderman Barden favoring the permit.

ATTELL GETS KENDRICK IN SIX-ROUND BOUT

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 9.— Monte Attell won a decision over Jem Kendrick of Portland in their six-round bout before the National Club. In the second Kendrick dazed Attell by an elbow blow on the right temple, but in every succeeding round Attell had Kendrick at will, finally finishing banging on and bleeding from nose and mouth. Kendrick was warned repeatedly for rough work in the clinches. Attell was unmarked. Benny Kaufmann of Philadelphia, by better infighting, won by a shade over Joe Clarke of Wilkesbarre.

SYMONDS IS A BILLIARD STAR

Earl W. Symonds of Lynn, better known as plain "Kid," is now the proud possessor of two medals which he captured by winning both the pool and billiard championships of Essex county. Symonds is but twenty years old and many of his friends are predicting a bright outlook for the youngster in the future.

Young Symonds won the three-cushion billiard championship after a hard battle which lasted nine weeks, defeating Del Lamson in the final and deciding match.

Symonds has held the pool championship medal since September when he won it from Arsen Pirgiblieos. This medal has changed hands four times and will be again put up for competition on January 27 at the Emporium. Although some of the players of this section are entered in the tournament, including Jack Pirgiblieos, Symonds is sure that he will be in the running.

The billiard medal was donated by Brown & Sons, manufacturer of billiard and pool tables. It is handsomely engraved.

Symonds is the son of Charley Symonds, one of the best known sporting men of Essex county.

MELLODY-PERRON IN 12-ROUND DRAW

NEW BEDFORD, Jan. 9.—A large crowd at the New Bedford A. A. witnessed a fine fight between Honey Mellody of Providence and Frank Perron of Rhode Island. The referee called the bout a draw, saying that he gave the decision that way because Mellody weighed ten pounds more than Mellody.

Young Sylvia of this city knocked out Paddy Walsh in the first round, and Young Cobb of Montreal beat Bob Langley of this city after eight rounds.

CARNEY TO COACH PHILLIPS EXETER NINE

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 9.—John J. Carney, baseball player and scout, has been chosen baseball coach at Phillips Exeter Academy. The notification came from H. A. Ross, athletic director at Exeter, and Mr. Carney will accept and soon report for duty. During the last two seasons Carney has been in charge of the baseball squad at New Hampshire College at Durham.

BART SULLIVAN TO COACH HOLY CROSS

Bart Sullivan, the amateur track star, has been engaged by the Holy Cross Athletic Association to coach the college track team this year. The B. A. A. will be the first meet in which the Purple men will be entered, while an outdoor track meet with another large college is now pending for some time in April.

Tommy Flanagan Is Out for Honors in Bantam Division

By JACK CONWAY.

Tommy Flanagan of Cambridge is rapidly gaining recognition as the bantam-weight division. Tommy isn't a top notcher, but he is a comer. The popular little Cambridge boxer is still having semi-finals at the big fight clubs around New England. Inside of a year, however, he should be showing his prowess in main bouts unless he goes stale. The Cambridge favorite is eighteen years of age.

Flanagan has engaged in twenty-five bouts as a professional. He has won several of them by a knockout, in eight he has been awarded a decision, eight have been draws, while he has lost two decisions.

Flanagan has knocked out Kid Thomas, Teddy Murphy, Harold Walker, Felix Maguire, Eddie Smith, Young Loppa and Kid Raymond. He has outpointed Tommy Lee, Frankie Maguire, Teddy Murphy, Kid Lee, Felix Maguire, Tommy Doris, Jimmy Rothwell, Sonny Cohen. Flanagan has fought draws with Harry Myers, Frankie O'Connor, Kid Lee, Chicken Rosskin, Teddy Murphy, Al Limerik, Kid Thomas and Ed Sexton. Decisions were lost to Frankie O'Connor and Freddie Maguire.

Flanagan is a good boxer and a hard hitter. It takes an exceptionally fine boxer to hold his own with Sam Greene's protege. Tommy is the master of a mistifying jab which worries him with a left hook. After Tommy has worn down his man by working his left overhand he lets the right into play. It is then usually a case of finishing.

Flanagan is now open to meet the best bantamsat in New England. Tommy is able to make as low as 118 pounds and still be strong. The Cambridge boy is not bashful in signing up to meet the best featherweights in this section.

Some of the best amateur boxers in New England are billed to perform at the boxing tournament of the Quincy A. A. tonight. Over twenty bouts will take place before the curtain is rung down. The bouts should be fast and interesting. There will be bouts in the 115, 125 and 135 pound class, besides a special three-round go at 145 pounds between Ed Bennett of the Quincy A. A. and P. Leveile of the Riverside Boat Club. The amateur boxers have been given plenty of chances to show their skill this season. It is hoped that some good men will be developed for the New England and national championships which takes place in Mechanics Building in the Spring.

Al Delmont is reported as being in excellent condition for his fight-round bout with Young Perez of Lynn, which is scheduled to take place at the American A. C. to-morrow night. Delmont defeated Delmont in a twelve-round bout at the Armory A. A. in June, 1908. Since that time Delmont has been on the front with a rush while Perez has failed to defeat any of the topnotchers. There are many "fans" who would like to see Jimmy Dyer, the Lynn bantam box them. There is little possibility of this pair of lightweights getting together again in a local ring, unless the Armory A. A. reopens.

Kid Goodman is back in town after a trip to Nova Scotia. The oldtimer would like to get dates with the best 138-pound boxers in New England. Goodman is now under the management of Kid Block. The latter is very enthusiastic about Goodman's chances against the best local boys. He started to-day. Goodman is coming back strong, and, believe me, there are those boys who claim that they are regaining their old-time form. Goodman is pitted against Goodman. My man knows the boxing game from A to Z, and with a little more training will be there with the best of them. Note—Kid Block is an enthusiastic speaker—at times.

Joe McCarthy has a grouch. The popular South Boston middleweight has been ducking several weeks ago when he tried to rain to get a match for "Irish Paddy" Callahan with Mark Conley, but now Joe has another grouch. Joseph gallops over to the office to-day and chirped: "Paddy Callahan is being criticised by many fight fans for his having a match against Conley at the American A. C. the other night. Paddy is a good boy, but he can't put a pink tea fighter and as a result didn't get over the Sands Ad. Now here we're bidded to us, both the kidney and the press agents, also the fans are permitted to hit in the clinches. In other words, his hands were tied. Allow me to lose two blows, and I am willing to wager dollars against hairpins that Paddy can put O'Connor away in a ten-round bout."

Jack Dillon of Indianapolis, who mingles with Bob Moha in a six-round bout at Providence to-morrow night, is said to be the legitimate middleweight champion as the result of his victories over Frank Klaus and Leo Houck. Dillon is a very aggressive boxer and is very willing to stand toe to toe with an opponent and swap punch for punch. Frank Klaus while in Dillon's makeup which enabled him to defeat Houck to a pulp at Indianapolis on New Year's day.

"Mike Twin" Sullivan went visiting yesterday and in the course of events arrived at the office. Mike is anxious to learn if he was good skallny on Jamaica Pond, Michael inclined very mild and said: "I'd like to get a match with Paddy Lavin or Mike Gibbons. I am sure that I could defeat either of these claimants for the welterweight championship."

HORSEMEN MEET IN NEW YORK TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—With hopes of bringing back the Lexington, Ky., track, which has been "outlaw" for several years, the Grand Circuit stewards, the arbiters of harness racing in the Eastern States went into session to-day at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The current meeting of the turf magnates was expected to be one of the most important in years. Applications for dates from a host of newcomers—Salem, N. H., and Pittsburg—and a movement had been launched to bring the Columbus, O., track back under the Grand Circuit management. Henry Wehle, a well-known horseman of Hartford, Ct., and Readville, Mass., was here with a proposition to hold a three-day meet in New York city. Wehle's plan is to fill out the week here which is allotted to Buffalo. Only three days' racing is allowed at Buffalo, which would leave two vacant days, allowing time for transportation of horses to this city.

FATHER MATHEWS TO PLAY MILTON

But one game in the Greater Boston A. A. A. C. basketball league will be played this evening, the Cunningham Gym team playing the Father Mathews team at Cambridge. The Milton team is the strong favorite for the game and they should win. They have been putting up a great game this season and have played a much better game than the Cunningham quintet.

The St. Mathews have not been able to win a winning streak as yet, but the boys have not lost courage, and they expect to start a winning streak almost any night. The Cambridge team will go hot after tonight's game, as the Milton crew heads the league, and he would be a good team to pull down.

A. B. P. ROLLERS BUSY TO-NIGHT

The Arlington Boat Club will roll at Newtowne alley Colonial tracks in Newburyport to-nest Boston in the Amateur Boston Pin series to-night. As the teams are closely bunched both matches are sure to be close and interesting.

Newtowne will never be satisfied until it regains the leading position which it lost to the B. A. A. a week ago, and promises to go after the pins to-night for high scores. The Arlington Boat Club dropped considerably last week by losing all four points to Colonial, but expect to make up lost ground.

Colonial will have plenty of trouble in beating the Dalton team to-night, as the latter has the big advantage of rolling at home. The Colonial quintet has been coming along good lately and promises to keep up their winning streak by capturing all four points from the Arlingtons.

Highland, with the advantage of rolling at home, has a good chance to repeat at least two of the other teams by a clean sweep. The team is now tied with Malden and also has a good chance of replacing Townsend.

A trio of interesting matches are scheduled to take place in the Custom House League at the New Boston alleys to-night. The fight for second position, with Inward Foreign and Naval Office as contenders, looks to be a hot one. The Inward Foreign team has shown marked improvement in every match, and will undoubtedly cause the leaders some trouble before the schedule runs out.

Naval Office, one of the sentimentals of second position, will have to travel at a fast clip to keep pace with the team that meets the Appraisers. The latter team has been bowling at the same steady gait all season. Inward Foreign, the other contender for the second position, should have very little trouble in taking all four points from the Storekeepers.

Notes of the Alleys

Bill Hennessey of the South Boston Yacht Club in the Suburban Interstate League is rapidly gaining in the individual averages up to date. He has 101 average.

O'Brien with 107, Donnelly 106 and Pinegan 102 are cracking the pins in fine shape in the Knights of Columbus League.

Shawmut is one point ahead of Dunn in the Furniture League, with an average by bowling 94 and 92 for the Shawmuts.

Valeur is still ahead in the A. O. U. W. League. Oriental and Franklin are just behind.

Gilman Brothers have a crack bowler in Fultz. He has a 99 average in the Trade League. Fultz is leading the league by a margin of 3 points.

Sam Greene of the Murray & Irwin team is still up with the leaders with an average of 101. Keep it up, Sam.

Mr. Nims, who has an average of 99 for the Harvard City League team, bowled 25 strings at the alleys the other night for a 105 average.

Allen, with 98, leads the individual bowlers in the Eastern League.

"Cannon Ball" Upham is gaining every week in his average. This is Bill's first season in big company and so far he is showing good form.

Both A. Bean and C. Bean have 95 average in the Church League. They roll on the Dorchester Baraca team.

Frank Graves is making the pins fly in the Suburban League, with an average of 97. Graves is one of the famous Durkoo Specials who are looked to roll high honors against "Dutch" Hintze Congress Specials.

FIGHTERS HAVE QUEER CAREERS

The average prize fighter comes from the obscure station in life. Many of the best known fighters have sprung into world-wide notoriety from drudging occupations, some shine-spirited manager discovering their ability, other mechanics, blacksmiths, etc., have indulged their natural love for the fistic art and gradually risen to the expert class.

Jimmy Kilbane never earned more than a few dollars a week working for a railroad until he attracted attention from the athletic club managers. He never rattled the dollars extensively until Jimmy Dunn took hold of him and made him a champion-ship contender.

Young Corbett, used to earn $6 a week before he fought Metavers. Terry himself was a poor newsboy when picked up by Sam Harris, who made a champion out of him.

Jeffries was earning $15 a week in California as a hardy man in a boiler shop when Billy Delaney took hold and made a fighter of him.

Bob Fitzsimmons did not have more than one suit of clothes when he came to this country from Australia.

Jim Corbett left a good position in a Frisco bank to enter the ring. Jim, by the way, but there were few like him. Sharkey, Gardner, Ryan, Erne and many other fistic stars were all poor at the time of entering out for pugilistic honors. Following is a list of other well-known fighters and their former vocations:

Heavyweights—Gus Ruhlin, pressman; Peter Maher, cooper; Tom Sharkey, sailor; Kid McCoy, farmer; Jim Jeffords, sailor; Joe Choynski, candymaker; Denver Ed Dunkhorst, bootblacking; Jim Jeffries, farmer.

MANDOT BESTS ALLEN.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 9.—Joe Mandot of New Orleans outpointed Billy Allen of Memphis for the championship of United States at every stage of their eight-round bout here to-night. Referee Athletic Club and was awarded the decision.

GREEN FIVE OFF TO PLAY TIGERS

HANOVER, N. H., Jan. 9.—The clever and speedy Dartmouth quintet has started off on a campaign which is liable to make or break the chances of running away with the Intercollegiate basketball championship, its first year in the league.

Already the team has swamped Columbia, last year's champions, 30 to 18, and Yale has gone under 37 to 16. On this trip it plays Princeton at Princeton to-morrow, Wesleyan at Middletown the following day and Cornell at Ithaca on the 13th.

If the Tigers and the Ithacans dip their colors to the Green, Penn will be the only remaining undefeated combination. Coach Mullen and Manager Fuller have taken the following men: Captain Messel, Margeson, Snow, Skeen, Gibson, Jones, Londou and Borden.

FREDDIE HUNTINGTON HARVARD STRONG MAN

Freddie Huntington, the Crimson hockey team leader, is Harvard's strongest man, with a record of 1302.2. F. H. Leslie, who held the title last year, is second thus far with a mark of 1266.2. The third man on the list is Tudor Gardiner, the football tackle, who was severely injured in the game against Princeton that he has not been in athletics since. Gardiner's mark is 1132.4. The other seven men in the honor group of the first ten are: W. Moffatt, '13, 1061; C. C. Loomis, '13, 1058; C. Paine, '12, 1056; H. B. Walker, '14, 1045.7; Meehling, '12, 1044.4; A. Miller, '14, 1042.1; H. Gardiner, '13, 1040. Huntington's total is the points behind the high mark of a year ago, when Leslie had a record of 1313 points.

SOCCER CHAMPIONS WILL TOUR EAST

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 9.—The St. Leo soccer team, champions of the Middle West, will tour the East after the close of the season. The schedule is: Tuesday at Philadelphia, March 16; Tom Rines of West Hoboken at Newark, March 17; Brooklyn at New York, March 20; Harvard Y. M. C. A. Building, at Providence, R. Encourage Emotions; Dwell in the Land of Romance

The Emotions Are the Ideals of Life, and the Ideals Must Be Encouraged if One Wishes to Escape Becoming the Paragon of Death—the Mummy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"LET those love now who never loved before. Let those who always loved now love the more."

Let us take a good look at the Egyptian mummy.

Its little hands are quiet; its little mouth is pinched as if it were trying to keep back the secrets of the ages; its little eyes are closed to all life, to all emotion.

It is a perfectly proper little lady, in a fashionably accepted sense.

It not only shows no emotion now, but it looks as if it had never felt any. Its little heart has been crumbled so long that if it ever longed and ached and loved, there is no sign.

Do you want to be like the Egyptian mummy? Do you want to shed every emotion, which means every instinct of life, in mortuary bands?

Of course you don't, but when you put a restraint on yourself for fear you will laugh too long, or smile too often, or love too much you are doing it.

Ideals Must Be Encouraged

The emotions life on the ideals of life, and the ideals must be encouraged if one wishes to escape becoming the paragon of death, a mummy.

To encourage the ideals, read a sweet, clean love story often, and put yourself in the place of the lover. Don't be ashamed to go about your daily tasks dreaming of princes and potentates who will come bearing their hearts in their hands.

Dwell in the Land of Romance. It will strengthen your powers of imagination and sweeten you for the day that is coming when fancy is subdued by fact.

When you see a little love story in life, don't scoff at it as a sign of weakness, but respect it as a sign of strength.

"We are all born for love," said Disraeli. "It is the principle of existence and the only end."

He did not let his burden of public life deprive him of this heritage, and the love story he lived has a more human interest than the deeds which engraved his name in marble.

Girl of Many Loves Better Wife

One may love foolishly, but it is not to one's discredit, and much to one's credit. "For to be wise and love exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods alone."

What if air castles have no foundation and are based on dreams, the building of them is not only a great joy to the aerial architect, but the man, or woman, who builds often is a joy to others. The visionary are always hopeful; the romantic are always sweet and tender.

The old woman who smiles at a memory of a love story her days have long since ceased to youngest, broader in mind and charity, sweeter and more wholesome and helpful than the old woman who regards a confession of love as an admission of weakness or shame.

The girl who is emotional and loves many, and shows it, will be a better wife, a more devoted mother, than the stupefied young woman who has her heart in iron bands.

Refuse to feel any emotion, and the day is coming when in your great anguish you will find that you can't.

"I cannot love as I have loved, and yet I know not why; It is the one great woe of life to feel all feeling die."

"The one great woe of life!"

That is something worth while avoiding, and the only way is to encourage your heart to expand.

How to Be Beautiful

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER

VARIOUS readers have written me, each differently, asking for a cold cream and I have advised them for their own good not to attempt to make the cream but to buy it ready made. Here are my reasons:

Years ago it was very difficult to get good toilet preparations at a moderate price. Outside of the big cities it was very hard to get them at all, and the woman who made her own cream according to reliable formulas knew that she was getting something good, though it was never very cheap unless she bought the ingredients in large quantities at wholesale prices.

In those days the buyer wasn't always sure whether she was getting pure and harmless preparations over the counter. To-day she is protected in this transaction by the Pure Food and Drug law, without whose guarantee on all labels no preparations are sold.

As to the price. In the last ten years there has been a considerable advance in price on almost all articles which go to the making of toilet creams, especially on pure lanolin. Consequently while the wholesale buyer must suffer somewhat, the woman who purchases a very small quantity, just enough to make one or two jars of cream, pays double and often treble the regular "market" price for her ingredients before she starts to make her cream.

Now for the making. It takes more experience and more hauck to whip up good cold cream than to make a light French omelette or pastry, and any one who is a good cook knows that there is just something a good cook has to be born with or all the schooling in the world won't help her to turn out a perfect meal.

Some time ago a woman started out to make cold cream according to the standard formula of the United States Pharmacopoeia. Goodness knows at what drug stores she bought her ingredients or how she managed to distort the directions, but at all events at the end of many hours of hard work she had completely lost her temper, wasted her time and one entire dollar, and she had to show for it one hard slab of marble-like gray substance which had to be thrown away.

She isn't the only one who has wasted time and money trying to economize and make her own preparations, and unless it is absolutely necessary to do so it is cheaper to buy your cream ready made.

Most of the good firms who manufacture toilet preparations give out samples, and thus allow the woman who is not sure what kind of cream she can use successfully on her face to experiment free of cost until she finds the right kind. No printed formula would tell her that, and after she had made her own cream at considerable expense she might find it did not agree with her. For face creams and skin foods are like any other kind of foods, often excellent in themselves, but not suited to all tastes, and you cannot be by getting them ready made nowadays, when the standard of excellence is so high and no harmful preparations are permitted to be sold under the law.

The Girl Who Came Back

To-day's Complete Short Story.

MOTIONLESS, as one chilled by the shadow of hovering death, James Morton sat by the bedside, with chin resting on his hand, mentally drifting into merciful insensibility. He had done his best; but here the inexorable outstretched hand was not to be denied.

Conscious of the impending end, the old man lay breathing in stertorous gasps, and fighting with all his weakening will to stave off the darkness of oblivion.

Suddenly his eyes opened wide. Into the dimly lighted room the whirr of an approaching taxicab penetrated. At the abrupt stop the flicker of a tender smile told the watcher that he yet understood. From the dry lips came an unintelligible whisper.

Jim Morton rose and bussed himself at the little table. His strong, clean cut face showed no sign of emotion, but, because he, too, had dreamed something of the dream of the old man, he needed the seconds to get a grip of himself.

When the girl entered he turned and regarded her steadily with apparent unconcern.

Costumed in rich furs, gowned for a supper at some restaurant, she stood in the doorway, taking in the details of the mean room, with a little gasp, she moved to the bedside and fell on her knees.

On the borderland of unconsciousness, the old man lay smiling, while the stupefied young woman who has her heart in iron bands.

The question remained unanswered. The dulled brain now held but the one idea. His gaze went appealingly to Jim, who, reading question in it, bent over him. Gropingly the feeble hands went out, until they had found his own and that of the girl. Conscious of his purpose, they suffered him to bring them together across the coverlet, and there they remained interlocked with his own upon them.

"Rosie—Jim—together—always."

Proud of Success

Together they remained smiling into his eyes until consciousness faded from them, and then, very gently, Jim released his fingers.

"Is this the end?"

"He will go out like that," Jim's voice was very steady. "I'm glad you arrived in time."

"Why did you not let me know, Jim?" she faltered.

"He would not have it so," he answered, as he rose. "What might have been done when he was stricken I have done. But—"

"Oh, I know you would do that!" she cried. "But I was his daughter. I could have done so much."

"It is the same house we lived in together, boy and girl," said Jim. "He was there."

The quiet reproach started the woman to her feet. With hand pressed to her breast and glistening eyes she gazed across at him.

Dispassionately he faced her. In level tones, scarcely above a whisper, he went on:

"Don't think he resented it. He was very proud of your success; but no one knew from him that Rosie Quintard, the favorite comedienne, was his daughter. Shall I tell you how he talked of you to me? It amounted to just this. The ignorant old cabby would do nothing to cause his girl a laughing stock for her new friends. Often at nights he would laugh gleefully to think of the wonder of your success after your upbringing. Many times he would desert the rank early in the evening to turn, 'You would not see him in the gallery; but I can picture him clapping with the best. That night he persuaded me to go with him I remember his eyes were shining as we trudged home. And always he believed that to-morrow you would drop in to see him and the day he found deserted and whom he fathered—the boy, who, in the old days, was your big brother. Until the last he worked. He wanted to see you sometimes. Even from me, who had more cause to make some return for all his kindness, he would take nothing."

"Don't Jim!" she pleaded. "You don't know how you hurt me. I was thoughtless and flighty—always have been—but I cannot help my nature. The life here was maddening. Ever the longing to break away tore at my affection. He would not hear of the stage for me—and I left him. Perhaps if you had not gone away, Jim, things might have been different.

"For a time I made no way, but the life had me in its grip. A song—a silly song with a catchy lilt—shot me to sudden fame. The rest you can guess. The gaiety, the excitement—all that conspired to make the old sordid life but a memory. Now"—

"He will pass like that," said Jim, as if he had not heard. "If you have an engagement"—

Dropped Her Hands

She dropped her hands at that, as if chilled by his coldness, and shook her head.

"I will stay," she whispered.

"Very well. I have some rather urgent cases"—

"Jim!" Her hands went out to him again. "You think meanly of me, I know, and I deserve it. But I want you to believe that I have won through clean."

"Why tell me?" he whispered. "Can I not see it? We had no fear for you." "Will you not tell me of yourself?" she asked. "You're changed, Jim—older grown and stern."

"Yes?" Her fingers were busy unbuttoning the long coat. He placed the chair for her, and stopped to replenish the fire. The feeling of weariness had magically been dispelled. When he looked round she stood revealed in a plain black dress, which, intuitively he attributed to her own deft fingers.

Felt Him Tremble

Quietly she moved to him and placed her two little hands on his broad shoulders.

"Something has happened to me, Jimmy, boy, and you've got to tell me what to do," she said. "Until that night—I confess with shame—it was always easy for me with me. I was wilful and thoughtless, I wanted to have a good time. Luck came my way, and every thing was rosy. You can guess the life. It turned my head, Jim. I forgot my nearest and dearest. In the hour you left me with God it all came back on me. It's been that way ever since."

Beneath her fingers she could feel the tremor of emotion that shook him at her words. She noted how his hands came up a little way, to fall again heavily to his sides.

"It's just this, Jim," she went on. "I told you, didn't I?" There's somebody who wants to marry me; but I cannot go to him"—

"Rosie!" His two hands came up again and gripped her shoulders fiercely, hungrily. She held him off, and, at the effort, some measure of control came back to him. His arms fell away from her. The old strained look showed on his face.

"In the old days, Jim, we were sweethearts," she murmured smilingly. "Sweetheart, boy. Crowded pleasures and excitements filled my days. But with your hand again in mine the old affection seemed to leap to my heart—and I want you for my other man. Whether you take me soon or late"—

"Take you!" he whispered, with her upturned face in his hands close pressed to his own. "Ah, little Rosie, if you knew how I have longed for you! But I cannot selfi your life. I could not"—

She stopped him with her hand upon his lips.

"Do you not think I have weighed it up?" she cried. "The other goes, Jim, long ago, you like. You will not stay here long."

"Little sweetheart," he murmured hoarsely, as his arms enfolded her. "You're very sure of this? It is by the as he wished—Rosie and Jim together always."

"Always, Jim!" she whispered, as she yielded her lips.

Not Disconcerted

"YES, madam," said the cement seller, "bonding up a pint whose fragments had been glued together, "you will observe that Stickum's Patent Family Cement possesses anything firmly and everlasting. To this plate, for instance, I now suspend by a wire a twenty-five pound weight, and the cement holds firm. I increase the weight to thirty pounds, and"—

Here the plate broke along the cracked line.

Double-Ended Stories

By WEX JONES

ESTELLE was dissatisfied with life in the country town where she lived.

Her parents had a beautiful home and Estelle had many friends in Osceola Corners.

One in particular, young Jack Snoogle, was a very close friend indeed. Jack was the only unusual young man who owned a large and prosperous farm on the county road.

But Estelle was tired of Jack. He lacked polish, she thought. He had not the city ways that are so fascinating.

Accordingly, when Estelle left Osceola Corners on the stage, she didn't send Jack Snoogle her address.

ENDING NO. 1.

Ten years later Estelle returned to Osceola.

The old village looked much the same, but Estelle had changed. She craved the intense life of the vocalist in a moving picture house.

So she quickly shook the dust of Osceola Corners from her feet, hat, gloves and skirt and hurried back to catch the daily train east.

As for Jack Snoogle, he kept on plowing his potatoes, all ignorant of the fact that Estelle had been in the village.

Anyway, he would have been afraid to show any interest in her, for Mrs. Snoogle was what the neighbors called a holy terror.

ENDING NO. 2.

As Jack Snoogle didn't know where Estelle was living in Boston, he had to make a house-to-house canvass of the entire city.

This took quite a long time, and when Jack had covered Roxbury and Charlestown he was about ready to give up the quest.

But he persevered, and finally he had inquired for Estelle in every building in Exchange Place.

Alas! Estelle had moved to Roxbury just after Jack had finished his inquiries in that village.

So they never met,

KISMET

After an hour's hard prevarication, the musical instrument dealer had succeeded at last in working off the cheap corner on a customer at four times its value.

"Anyone made in my appearance," said the third Napoleon, "and the improvement in my health that was noticeable from the very first. My fat began to vanish at the rate of one pound a day, sometimes more. I knew I had at last discovered the secret that had been vainly sought for years, and I continued the treatment until I had lost more than 100 pounds in weight. I was stronger with every pound I lost, and soon regained all my old time vigor of both body and mind. It made me feel twenty years younger to be rid of all the fat that had formed under me and over my body. After discontinuing the treatment I found I had developed powers of endurance that are proverbial. After diligent inquiry I found the cause of my illness more than ever convinced that they were using there to lapse methods of fat reduction and fat prevention far in advance of anything known to medical science in this country. As the finding of such a secret was a matter of life or death to me at that time, I consulted numerous authorities and set about asking questions of those who would be likely to know anything about it. I am glad to say that my untiring efforts were finally rewarded by the discovery of a new means of fat reduction that I determined to give a short trial immediately. I was fairly startled to behold the wonderful change it made in my appearance,

A camel race on the desert! The scoundrel Desmond urges his mount after the camel on which Claude and Rosamond are fleeing to escape him. Even with his double burden the swift camel which Claude has selected is fast outstripping the villain's. As they drew away from Desmond, Claude and Rosamond notice a strange figure driving a wagon through the desert. It is none other than Europe's most famous sand sculptor, who is in search of the finest Sahara and. But what can a peaceful artist do to aid a hero against a villain?

Art is a wonderful thing. As some one has said, art is long and life is short. Consequently we never know all that there is to be known about art. Now a sculpture on the desert might appear remarkable enough in itself, but when it comes to be, as it does for the lovers. Deftly as any sculptor at a beach resort, this man takes the desert sand and rapidly creates an Italian camel corps, guns and all. This is true art, as it gives the desired impression at a glance, and small wonder that Claude and Rosamond rejoice in the skill of their friend.

When Desmond sees the sand camels in the distance, he is downcast but not discouraged, and though he takes them for a regular battery, he resolves to charge them, for, at all costs, he is resolved to capture Rosamond and put her heroic lover, Claude, to torture. Naturally he is pleased to hear that our hero, as he, Rosamond and the sand sculptor look on with the liveliest interest. Claude knows that when Desmond sees the sand camels they will be half smothered in sand. For the result, see to-morrow's paper.

The Mayor of Ealing, England, and the nine past Mayors of the borough have promised to plant an oak tree in Walpole Park, Ealing, in commemoration of a year in office. The number will be added to by each succeeding Mayor, until what will be known as the Mayors' avenue will be formed. Since 1873 more than 12,000 trees have been planted in Ealing, and at the present time there are fifty miles of avenues.

The Story of the New Play by George Broadhurst

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By John A. Moroso

Copyright, 1911, by George Broadhurst.

"It seems to me that there are great possibilities in that job of yours," he said, solemnly, as Virgie pulled out her hairpins. "Of course, there are a lot of these millionaires who would rent a whole floor of a hotel and who wouldn't know a good girl when they saw one; but, again, there are some of them who would be mighty glad to get a good wife who would take care of things and not throw good money away like these fashionable women do."

"You see, it's this way, Virgie," he went on. "A good wife is a good investment. A lazy and spending wife is a bum investment. Now, if a man has a stock of money and has the right kind of a wife and home life, he can be anything he wants. The wife will push him ahead instead of dragging him backward."

"Is that so, Jimmie?" asked Virginia.

"Why, of course, anybody can see that's true."

"Do you think I'd make you the head shipping clerk, Jimmie?" asked Fanny.

"Aw, say," complained Jimmie, "cut out that shipping clerk business, will you? I've got brains, I have. Just wait until I get my chance and then you'll hear of me. I'll show a lot of these Wall street men that I have plenty of ideas, and good ones. All that I need is a chance."

"Well, run to the delicatessen shop and get three slices of ham and a half dozen eggs," ordered Fanny. "We will have broiled ham and an omelet."

"Anything else, dear?" asked Jimmie.

"Yes; here's the money."

Jimmie had just put his wages in the bank that day, leaving himself just enough to pay the landlady and provide his lunch and carfare for the week.

"Let me buy the things, Fanny," he asked. "It ain't fair, you know."

"Very well, Jimmie," replied Fanny.

Jimmie had only carfare with him. He had confidently expected Fanny to force the money on him.

He started for the door again, paused, looked back, and then began to grope in his mind for an idea, a real idea, one that would bring quick results.

Where Jimmie Was Trapped

He thought of his watch. It was the one-dollar watch, and no pawnbroker would have given him more than twenty-five cents on it. He thought of his scarfpin. It was a near-pearl, and worth twenty cents. Eggs cost forty cents a dozen, and the ham would come to another thirty, easily.

"Well, what's the matter?" demanded Fanny. "Why don't you get a move on?"

Jimmie hemmed and hawed, fearing that at any moment the great helpful idea would flash through his brain. It did not flash.

"The fact is," he told Fanny, "I had forgotten that I left my money in my room."

With a laugh Fanny ran to him, gave him the money for the supper purchases, kissed him and sent him on his way.

"Jimmie is a good boy and I love him," declared Fanny, when Jimmie was out of the room. "It may take some time for him to get that raise, but when he does we are going to be married and I am going to make him a good little home. Some of these days he will get the right idea—and then!"

"And then what?" asked Virginia.

"He will become rich and I'll be a lady, a real lady, with servants and silks and satins and the theatre and taxicabs to the matinee," she replied.

"I hope it will all come true, dear," replied Virginia. "You have been a staunch and true sister and you work as hard as any girl does. If anybody deserves happiness you do."

"And say, Virgie," said Fanny. "If one of those millionaires at the hotel should marry you, all that would be necessary would be to land Jimmie a job where he could use his brains instead of a brush and stencil. He would make good and so would I, I believe, Virgie."

Virginia was thinking of Stafford. She blushed and said: "Don't talk nonsense."

Stafford Sends Roses

A boy in the glorious livery of the hotel where Virginia was employed showed a ruddy and smiling face. His little arms clasped a huge bunch of roses.

"Miss Blaine," he said, "Mr. Stafford sent these. Here's a note."

"Mr. Stafford!" cried Fanny. "Who's he, Virgie?"

Virginia took the note and opened it.

Fanny peeked over her shoulder brazenly.

"Dear Miss Blaine," the note read. "As to-morrow is Sunday I presume you might like a bouquet of flowers to wear to church. I hope that you will accept them with my most respectful compliments, and with my thanks to you for your great patience in getting that long-distance call for Washington. Sincerely, ROBERT STAFFORD."

Stafford's New Operator

SUNDAY was a day of uneasiness for Virginia. To all of Fanny's eager inquiries she turned a deaf ear or checked them with a curt reply.

Would Stafford manage to get some sort of hold on her through the comparatively high wages he offered her? she asked herself.

She knew that there was always a danger mark in such affairs between a working girl and a man of millions. Then, too, if she accepted gifts from him, or any sort of personal favor, the gossips of the hotel would begin to wag their tongues. However innocent she might be, she would not get credit for her innocence.

Virginia felt as if she could give up her place at the hotel; but careful study of this idea convinced her that it would be wrong to do that until matters reached a point where her self-respect would demand it.

The sacrifice would be a big one for her. She remembered the days of mental torture when there was the fear within her that they would again land on the side walk. They had been dispossessed once and had approached the pale of the utterly impoverished. If she gave up her place there would be only Fanny's poor little wages of seven dollars a week standing between them and the streets. The pretty little home they had made for themselves would have to be abandoned.

"No," she told herself. "I am strong enough to face this situation and if Mr. Stafford thinks I am to be bewildered by his wealth and his attentions, he will find out quickly that he is mistaken."

She would use her own judgment and trust to clear thinking and patience to draw the danger mark for the millionaire. Convinced that she had decided the matter rightly, her mind became at ease again. She prayed over it at church and asked for divine guidance.

She let Fanny wear some of Stafford's roses and the others she kept in a vase in their living room.

Virginia Begins Her Task

Monday morning she was at work on the minute and found that an extra day girl had been already installed. Her work would be for Mr. Stafford exclusively.

"You must not think that your task will be such a simple one," Manager Kahn told her. "Mr. Stafford is a man of the greatest affairs. He will give you a list of telephone numbers that will keep you busy. His idea is a good one, I think. He is interested in several hundred big ventures, and, you may not know it, he has one of the biggest fortunes in New York. His investments require the attention of hundreds of skilled people. He is putting you on his payroll because it is one of his principles that he will pay only the most capable of people. He never lets a good one go by and he always pays well."

Virginia thanked him for the implied compliment as she kept an eye on the switchboard.

The little light showing Stafford's number blazed forth, and she answered the call.

"Miss Blaine?" she heard her employer ask.

"Yes, Mr. Stafford."

"I am making out a list of instructions for you and shall be down to explain them in a few moments. Good-by."

Stafford soon appeared at the door of the little room set aside for the telephone operators. Hat in hand, he bowed to Virginia and asked as to her health.

"And now," he began, "your first day is going to be a busy one. You will find but you are not being overpaid when the end of the day comes. I have five meetings to attend to-day and each one is very important. Meanwhile, I will get a long distance call from Washington and one from Boston. I will not be in any one place more than an hour or so, and I want you to keep posted as to just where I am and can be reached.

He produced a sheet of paper covered with figures.

"Here, Miss Blaine," he said, "is the list of telephone numbers through which you can reach me. I have also jotted down the hours I shall be at each place. Here is my private office in Wall street and the name and telephone of my private secretary. Here also is a list of names of my more important business associates who may be trying to get in touch with me. Others, who may call, may not be worth while sparing time for. In a week or two you will know just whom to pay heed to and just whom to tell that I cannot be reached."

Virginia smiled.

"I shall make up a black list in time," she suggested.

"That is the idea," he exclaimed with a laugh. "You don't know how much good time is wasted by the average business man because of the demands of people he has no interest in, and yet who can reach him on the telephone."

With a cheerful good-by Stafford hurried from the little room and out of the hotel to his high-powered runabout. A few moments at his office to give instructions, and he began his round of meetings.

The Call from Washington

He was presiding at a meeting of the directors of one of his trust companies when the telephone on the table beside him tinkled.

The call was from Virginia.

"Here is Mr. Adams at Washington, Mr. Stafford," her voice sounded over the wire. "Go ahead."

Adams's information showed the business wisdom of Stafford's confidential telephone operator scheme. He was just in the nick of time with a report on a batch of proxies of stockholders, which meant an important detail in the affairs of the election of new officers. The proxies were on their way from Washington in the care of a lawyer and would be ready when the voting was started in the afternoon.

Stafford had found opposition to his plans in his board of directors, and now he would crush down that opposition as he had crushed all opponents in the past. Virginia had been quick at her work at a time when every minute counted.

Several times during the day she had to trail Stafford all over the business section downtown, sleuthing after him over the wires and running him down successfully each time. Several times he called her to give her a word of instruction or information as to his whereabouts.

The day was indeed a busy one and, when the millionaire showed up at the hotel towards twilight, he was radiant.

"Now the working day for both of us is over," he told her with a note of exultation in his voice. "To have dinner with me in the hotel restaurant. I can't have you up to my suite, for I have no chaperon. I can't ask you there very well, but in the restaurant you will be well guarded by hosts of people."

He laughed and seemed in high good nature.

"I can spare a little while in our window," replied Virginia, "but, Mr. Stafford, it would cause gossip for me to be dining with you in this manner after so short an acquaintance. You do not appreciate my position. I'm sure that you will on second thought."

Stafford Is Disappointed.

So, to Stafford's disappointment, they did not dine together.

And yet in the cool, dusk-filled corner of the parlor, with the music sounding faintly from another part of the hotel and the street lights and stars beginning to twinkle as night fell, Stafford felt strangely contented.

They talked of the business of the day and of fae business yet to be faced on the morrow and for many days thereafter.

"I am delighted with your service, Miss Blaine," he told her. "It is even better than I expected it would be. That call from Washington was landed for me at a most opportune moment. It meant the control of one of my favorite properties. I held off the election until certain proxies arrived and then I had them voted for my own interests."

"I was afraid that there would be little for me to do," Virginia replied, "but I found plenty of work and, to me, it was highly exciting. I think I would like to be a financier."

"It's a lusty game!" said Stafford. "You will be as interested as I am when you learn more of it."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

"I have been chasing a hat."

"Did your hat blow off?"

"It was not my hat; it belonged to somebody else, and it had a pretty girl under it."

"Did you catch it?"

"Yes, my wife saw me chasing it."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS
BEAR PRESSURE STATE ST. NEWS IN THE MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Canadian Pacific led in a downward movement which set in at the opening of the stock market to-day. Practically the entire list was affected. Canadian Pacific had been under pressure in London before the opening of the local market and the same movement was continued here after the New York market commenced the day's business. After opening at 253½ or 4 under last night's prices, selling continued to force down the price until the aggregate loss was 2⅝.

Tendency was also toward the destruction of the Equitable Life Assurance Society building. It closed with a depressive feeling which affected the bear-ish tendency.

The losses ranged from fractions upward. In addition to Canadian Pacific, other international shares felt the effect of consistent selling. U. S. Steel common was off ⅝, while the preferred sold off ¼ in the road. The list formally closed. Declines were: Amalgamated Copper, Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago Great Western, Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul, Colorado Fuel & Iron, Delaware & Hudson, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern ore, Illinois Central, Interborough-Metropolitan common, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred, Kansas City Southern, Lehigh Valley, Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, National Lead, New York Central, Norfolk & Western, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Reading, Rock Island common, Rock Island preferred, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway common, Southern Railway preferred, Texas & Pacific, Union Pacific, Union Pacific preferred, Wabash common, Wabash preferred, Western Maryland and Wisconsin Central.

The governing committee of the Curb Exchange has sent out notice that 700,000 shares of Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company have been admitted to the qualified list as if all issued.

The activity of the bond market in New York is a subject of busy investment accumulation. The only remunerative employment to be found for the Blue Flood pouring into banks there from the interior is in securities. This is a very significant sign of business contraction. Continued conservatism in money rates will extend the buying demand from the bond to the stock market.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The motor show now being held in Madison Square Garden is in short the greatest industrial exhibit of the kind ever seen in this country. Although the show is twelve years old, it seems to attract even more general attention than it did years ago since the motor car was looked upon as somewhat of a curiosity rather than as the necessary and practical vehicle of to-day. Not to be ignored in this connection is the increase in and appreciation of the vehicles of to-day and likewise of to-morrow for both pleasure and commercial purposes.

The show now being held represents many years of labor, many millions of dollars, hours and hours of work by mechanics and inventors, but all that is good and best in the motor industry is in the Garden are cars and cars, and the prospective purchaser need go to no other without making a selection.

The Stevens-Duryea occupies a prominent position on the floor of the Garden and is directly opposite its agency which is ruling the great value, beauty and efficiency of the car, which is shown in chassis with a new self-starting device, are invested in with interest. Mr. H. Bowman of Boston is naturally delighted with the car, which represents the results of years of labor by one of America's foremost designers and builders. Here the Six is shown with several body designs, runabouts and limousine, the latter being the model that experienced much favor with the public.

No more luxurious cars have ever been exhibited than the two Pecr-as closed cars now being shown by the Pierce Six. "Pierce Six" Berline limousine, upholstered in maroon Bedford cloth and genuine leather stripings, and panels and moldings in light purple.

Many Cars on View.

The "40-Four" limousine was built complete at the New York Service Building of the Peerless Company on upper Broadway. It is the only four-cylinder car in the exhibit. The upholstery is fawn broadcloth, with Spanish ash. The finish is Peerless blue, giving the car a rich and distinctive appearance.

This exhibit is made distinctive by the lines of the new Peerless limousine body. There are three open cars of different design on display, and two of the limousine style, in the bodies of all of these models a direct straight line effect is carried out the body work being so keep that the effect is evident. J. L. Snow of Boston, naturally, points with pride to the display.

The White Company is showing its complete line of gasoline cars, including the 60, 40 and 30 types, the self-starting six-cylinder 60 being shown for the first time. This car embodies all of the well known features of White construction and is distinctive from others except Flat six-cylinder cars, inasmuch as it carries out the White idea of the long-stroke block motor.

The new six-cylinder car, says J. S. Hathaway, in the absence of Mr. Stanley, introduced in this country having its motor cast in block. Great interest is also shown in this new six-cylinder car. Orders were sent in as soon as it was delivery was announced that the White Company was building this car, and before even a photograph, description or specification of any sort, except "six-cylinder White" was available.

The Winton exhibit, at which is found Arthur Hinchcliffe, the Boston agent, comprises six of the famous Winton six-cylinder touring motors. Everything is interesting at this time to recall the fact that the Winton was the first company to confine its product to six cylinder cars, and Hinchcliffe one of the first American makers to adopt as standard a self-starting device. The cars shown are: one chassis, torpedo-passenger; limousine, full fore; touring, six passenger torpedo, five passenger touring, our passenger toy roadster and a roadster, finished in various colors.

CHINESE ARMISTICE EXTENDED TO JAN. 15

LONDON, Jan. 8.—A special dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph under Pekin date states that the armistice between Chinese rebels and the imperialists has been extended to January 15.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Occasionally the ear catches a genuine human note in a musical drama in the period—not frequently, of course, for the average modern play, following the trend of the times, depends less upon quality of truth for success than upon its power to amuse with plain frivolity. The human note that raises a play from the ordinary level of dramatic quality sounded strong and true in the first act of "Lady Frederick" at the Park Theatre last evening, and those who took chances with the toy billboard found that Edgar Selwyn went straight to the bottom of things when he wrote this delightful comedy.

"The Country Boy" proved to be more than a laughing comedy of familiar types—it was a sermon that deserved to be heard in every home. It's lesson was clear and was lightened with humor that sparkled continuously. No company of this present season has supplied more fresh amusement, or spread a prettier sentiment. There is evidence of a sure power to give more unmistakable signs of enjoying itself. The dangers of stalled cars, snow drifts and possible pneumonia were completely forgotten in the warmth of "The Country Boy's" cheerful atmosphere.

Edgar Selwyn has written a play that was nevertheless, firmly woven in to substantial dramatic fabric, moving from the prosperous village of Lyndon to the lonely artificial city, where dee, air and bustle are supposed to make happiness. Among Hoosierdom was not all that young Jim Wilson was leaving behind him, but throbbing the world and longing it to do its part, he left his own for a larger field, and would have had a shrewd and kindly friend in the hand of any father of ordinate saved him.

The real joy of last evening's performance was to be discovered in the second and third acts, at Mrs. Bannon's lodging house in Fifty-First street. Here Jim found a broken down newspaper man, a ticket speculator, a pugilistic girl and a near prima donna, all doing their best to extract the sweetness of life from a place that was not joys. It was here that the philosophy of Jim's father, with the glimmer of English and where, in spite of its sordid atmosphere, Jim began singing and developed a kind of humor. Mr. Selwyn had drawn his characters exceedingly well, and they were admirably played.

George A. Wright, as the broken down writer, was a true and life like figure. He had had luck at its worst, and played the role brilliantly. Joseph Kaufman, as the prima donna, had been a "has been" for a long time, and Isabel Carlton, as the slow girl from the lodging house the height of careful acting. Mrs. Charles Craig was Jim's mother with a sundowning natural fidelity to the popular idea of a perfect mother. H. Dudley Hawley was the boy with splendid enthusiasm.

"The Country Boy" was crowded with bright lines. They don't have Jews in this play—they're Hecelahs and Ikes and Weinstein, the Broadway ticket speculator, says to Fairview will suffice. "That's why it's a village," retorted Weinstein.

With its wealth of humor, its brilliant dialogue and its appealing sentiment, "The Country Boy" should remain at the Park until next time.

Plymouth Theatre.

After four years' absence May Irwin is with us again, singing new "coon" songs and making the audience laugh with her in "She Knows Better Now," at the Plymouth Theatre. The play is from the comedy by Agnes I. Crimmins, a Radcliffe graduate. So Boston has an interest in her production, while scores are invited both for Radcliffe's playwriting fame, and for her being away from the dormitories, absence has only made the Boston heart grow fonder of the delightful Radcliffe.

Miss Irwin jollied herself about her own size and weight and cut capers generally in her songs. Some of the "coon" songs, to use the papers—are: "I'm Going to Dixie," "Father's Beard," and "Brain to Work."

Among her epigrams was one which tickled the audience mightily. "There is very enough to make a woman talk, but never enough to make her think."

From the time that she first appeared upon the stage as a girl of 16 years old until she made her last turned, May Irwin dominated the theatre. Her every line was the cue to go into shrieks of merriment, delighting them with her natural methods. Lighting them with her natural representation of a woman who winds here if out of the question, and later just exactly right.

The plot of the farce centred in domestic affairs, which caused Mr. Tompkins, the part May Irwin was playing, to go home drunk, and June came into possession when she refused to say to Mr. Tompkins "whose shoe had been stepped on, sir, all is ready to be served." The result was a separation between the Tompkins results in a sudden engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sturtevant appear upon the scene, the former full of his troubles. Mr. Sturtevant takes his wife and the Sturtevant and Tompkins family with the maid. Things grow interesting when Mrs. Tompkins is arrested in the absence of her husband. He says that if she would refuse to say those lines to Mrs. Sturtevant's cousin he would be served only too obvious. Then he becomes terribly jealous and orders her to stay. Being a good wife, she is ready to be served. Mr. Sturtevant's refusal to say those lines to Mrs. Sturtevant's cousin brings about the complete estrangement of this couple.

In comes Mrs. Tompkins and is informed of the situation by her husband, with Mrs. Sturtevant and the maid. Mr. Tompkins, who is supposed to be in Washington, arrives. Mr. Sturtevant and the butler, Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins go through the whole process as the two other couples. She refuses positively to say to Mr. Tompkins "beg pardon, sir, all is ready to be served." Mr. Tompkins finally discovers her intention of leaving her husband and going with him.

The second scene shows the Tompkins home set in Greenwich Village, where the husband is there awaiting her. So are the customs house officials who would her for smuggling. Heinrich von Hohenspitze then present himself as the butler and June as the maid. He leaves before Mrs. Tompkins arrives. In the meantime the officials search the house. Mr. Tompkins arrives and shortly after the Sturtevants and Mrs. Tompkins. The arrest of the customs house officials threatening an international affair.

The third act exposes the baron as an impostor, a man who was the dance of the German maid Hedwig. In her anger she threatens Tompkins says he loves Germans, you German." The husband and wife make up and June and Heinrich are married with customs house officials. The maid goes back to keep house for Mrs. Sturtevant ends with Mrs. Tompkins saying to their husbands, "beg pardon, sir, all is ready to be served."

Keith's Theatre.

Keith's Theatre this week offers one of those supremely good bills which has made B. F. Keith famous as an amusement manager. To the patrons it might well seem that the master has been in the theatre since the days of vaudeville and summoned to Boston for the week's bill. Every individual act is up to the line and put them all on one bill. The week's bill is composed of the best of vaudeville—singing, dancing, comedy, acrobatics and the comedy-drama playlet.

Rock and Fulton offer the most pretentious act of the bill—a splendid comedy-drama act with the rich setting of a restaurant with a grand staircase, beautiful ballroom, Hungarian orchestra and a company of ten richly costumed people. The plot is given background by the superlative dancing of Rock and Fulton themselves. In their dancing more than ever before Rock is dramatic dancing; the dance of the opera fiend and his dope fiend girl, and the dance of Pierrot and his sweetheart. Clarice Vance is with us again. She comes too seldom, now that May Irwin has become a "regular" actress. Their methods are quite alike, yet different. Clarice Vance, like May Irwin, sings for the intelligent—the words of the songs, the facial expression of the singer, are the things that make the Clarice Vance songs "go," and they certainly "get over" the footlights when Clarice "gets" a song fail. Miss Vance would not mind a suggestion, however. She suggests that "Salome" song, for not time's sake, it's a great song, though her new ones are good, too.

Professor Baker's famous amateur night was here the young American playwright is given a chance to represent on the bill by Miss Baker's class at Radcliffe College, Cambridge. Edward Sheldon, one of the best of our young playwrights, was a product of Professor Baker's teaching, and Miss Baker's first class wrote "The End of the Bridge." And now comes Miss Lewis with that most difficult of dramatic writing, the one-act play. She calls her playlet "The Case of Jim Corbett." It was presented for the first time on any stage at Keith's Memorial and in the company of vaudeville bosses, it was a most dramatic success. Miss Lewis and dramatic George M. Cohan and Will M. Cressy, and her writing comes gaily, would of not this.

Here is the plot: Carleton Jones is a lawyer. His wife severely graduates as a lawyer, and to her husband's grief she takes a case where she wants to help one husband, he wants her to stay at home. Jim Corbett, a prize fighter, takes the opposite side of the law case and then right in their own home comes the dramatic windup of the case when one of the contestants settles it. The wife defends the fee and her husband backs up his wife in her legal fight in defending it. He is forced to recognize her ability and instead of allowing her to become his cook and housekeeper he lets her law as well as his domestic partner.

Kaufman Trew plays the part of the man with womanliness and earnestness. Agnes Scott Brooks as the plaintiff has a forceful and especially good.

A number of prominent Bostonians were the guests of Miss Florence J. Lewis, the author. Among the members of the box party were President LeBaron Briggs of Radcliffe College and Mrs. Briggs, Professor Barrett Wendell, the secretary, and the executive board of Radcliffe, Professor John L. Ross and Mrs. Bates, Colonel Everett C. Benton, commander-in-chief of the Masonic bodies in Massachusetts, and Mrs. Benton.

The Three Nevaros are acrobats who do very difficult and original boasting feats with a dazzling ease and grace. Emmett and Lauria Rarles have a really "honey voice," and "honey" singing and dancing act; Matt Keefe comes again with his bean-pole form, voice and frank Stafford gives a delightful little comedy which might well be called "The Whistling Hunter. His whistling is fine."

National Theatre.

Heading the bill at the National Theatre this week and astonishing the audiences by its tricks, is Hardeen, brother of the famous Harry Houdini. Hardeen hasn't much to say, but he goes on with his work with a vim and swiftness, and never fails to consummate whatever he tries in a short roughly artistic manner. Three challenges have been received by him which are expected to test his mettle as it never has been required to do.

Then there is Frank Bush, one of the best entertainers in his line of monologues and stories on the American stage. Frank has not "shown" in Boston for many years. On his program are a number of good ones that are delighting all who hear him. He doesn't forget, however, some of the good old-fashioned tales.

The rest of the splendid bill is made up of the Wheelers, who are making the audience rock with laughter at their side-splitting fun. Their sketch is entitled "Fun on the Boulevard."

Mabey and Hill, just from England, are favorites. They sing splendidly and also have some up-to-date stories.

The Graziers are there with their musical act, Grace Wilson, Myles McCarthy & Co. in the "Yellow Streak" are fine.

Acrobatics are performed by Mintz and Wertz.

"Doing the Stores" is the title of a sketch in which Jorge and Hamilton appear.

Tremont Theatre.

Say, dearie, dear, and did you hear the news that's going 'round? Well, if you haven't it's time you did, for the new Ziegfeld "Follies" are in town—at the Tremont Theatre on Saturday night—they say, what a merry-go-round of mirth and music it is! Oh, joy, all the great stars in the comic firmament, unceasing an endless chain of fun and frolic, ending in the usual superb Ziegfeld show, up to the same high standard, and if anything, better than ever.

The big throng that sat in for the opening performance enjoyed every minute, and how they did applaud. My, 'twas an event to remember. They just seemed to be in the beginning, that galaxy of funmakers, and "The Whirl of Joy" whose comedy alphabet from A to Z, and then some, new jokes and songs, and dances, and costumes galore, a plenty of that, too.

There was Bessie McCoy, outdoing herself and winning new laurels; Fanny Brice, inimitable as ever; Leon Errol, working in the fun and making everybody merry; Charles A. Mason, up to snuff; Walter Catlett, better than good; Christian Duncan, Very Maxwell, charming as could be; Frances Cleveland Brown and Hope Dudley Twins, glorious dancers; Stella Chatelaine, Lillian Lorraine, Gladys Hanson, in a new way, Lottie Vernon, Peter Swift, Max Hart, Albert Herbert Williams—every one of them at his or her best, which means the very best there is in the business.

Songs? Many of them and tuneful. Chorus? Beautiful now and up to snuff stared. Costumes, scenery and everything just above par. Taken all in all, the "Follies" show was worth going miles to see, being one of the best performances of the kind ever given in Boston. And the customs inspectors pulling the "Follies" joke, you won't hope to tell it all anyway. There's scenes of it—"The Customs Inspector's Dream," "Ragtime Opera," "Everywife," which was a great show in itself and on and on—the acts and six teen scenes in all.

"The Girl Behind Us," looking all the world like a Ted section out of the AMERICAN Sunday magazine, is the new play with Miss McCoy on the job, made a distinct hit in itself. There were encores, ever so many of them, and the applause was grandly stinted, and—well, the only thing to do is to go and see the big show at the Tremont.

Grand Opera House.

The morality play is in town again. This time it appears at the Grand Opera House, where "Everyman's Daughter" began a week's engagement last evening. The central figure of the play is a young woman minister, whose life is filled with the uplifting power of religion leads her into a bitter struggle with the world, the flesh and the devil. Mrs. Arnold, who plays this difficult role, left a splendid impression on the first night's audience. "Everyman's Daughter" is a play for every thoughtful citizen.

Austin & Stone's.

The Electrical Wizards are the feature for another week in the curio hall at Austin & Stone's Museum. The audiences are much engaged in their astounding act, which were both amusing and interesting. A new bill was also presented in the theatre.

Howard Athenaeum.

James J. Corbett was the big feature at the Howard, drawing houses with "The Whirl of Mirth" company of burlesque entertainers. Mr. Corbett, who is always interesting, told lively stories of his ring career and made some timely suggestions regarding present day affairs in the pugilistic world. It made plain that Mr. Corbett is not in the friendly confidence of the present champion.

Hub Theatre.

The new program at the Hub Theatre contained several vaudeville novelties that pleased large audiences at the afternoon show of the house. There was also a new list of motion pictures.

Orpheum Theatre.

The handsome Orpheum Theatre was the setting at the front in Tripoli, are excellent examples of the new motion picture-graphy records important events in history and the scenes of the program was the list of Irish ballads, sung by Mabel Kilkenny and Frank Ryan.

Among the other features were several clever juggling acts, "An Indian Maid's Romance," "Our Poor Relation" and "Love Passing," all of which were new to Boston.

Plays to Come.

"The Never Homes" will be the attraction at the Shubert Theatre next week.

John Craig's "Uncle Sam" will come to the Hollis Street Theatre next week.

"The Third Degree" will be the next attraction at the Grand Opera House.

Scenic Temple.

Besides a new list of motion pictures and an excellent vaudeville novelties, the bill at the Scenic Temple was enlivened by a concert program by Leona Howe's orchestra.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The Suffering Suffragettes" was the rather alluring title of the new show at the Gaiety Theatre. As might be supposed the suffragettes in this particular case were all young, and fair to look upon, which added much to the spirit of the session. Two large audiences enjoyed the entertainment.

South End Theatre.

A new bill was presented at the South End Theatre. It was headed by Excello and Franks, two attractive young women who were seen in a "surprise" act. Other features included vaudeville novelties and motion pictures.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Jersey Lillies" came to Waldron's Casino Theatre for a week's stay, and those who enjoy good burlesque will find this company much to their liking. The company was composed of a group of very handsome young women and the usual number of comedians.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

It is military week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, and the big feature of the bill is "Under U. S. A. Rule," who present an interesting act. There are other features including a new list of pictures.

Plays That Hold Over.

"Baby Mine" began a new week at the Majestic Theatre last evening. This is one of the most enjoyable comedies of the season.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" entered upon a new week at the Boston Theatre, where it has been since the first of June.

The final week of "The Faun," with William Faversham, was begun at the Shubert Theatre.

"Mutt and Jeff" continues to draw capacity houses at the Globe Theatre, this week. Globe goers is now on its third month.

"The Concert" began its final week at the Hollis Street Theatre. It is a brilliant comedy.

"The Pink Lady" eases none of its charm for theatregoers, and is now well along on at the Colonial.

"The Wizard of Oz" remains at the Castle Square Theatre, where Mr. Craig's players are providing splendid entertainment.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is DOUBLE more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

The charred remains of the woman were not found for several hours, following the searching of the ruins by a squad of men under Chief John H. Sullivan. Her body lay under a pile of debris in the basement.

People's Thad y Smith, W. S. Leland George F. Child, A. J. Foster, Lee M. Friedman, J. J. Pierce, Walter shaw, Fred L. Morgan, John K. Whiting and Charles L. Gleason were added to the board.

Chief Sullivan is of the opinion that Miss Roach, while in the basement, was suddenly taken ill and dropped the lamp, which ignited the woodwork.

All the World's a Stage

Unfortunately, the World Does Not Appreciate the Work of the Real Actors

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal Examiner

This is a time to remember the good and hard work of the actors, playwrights and managers, whose task all the year round is that of stimulating, instructing and amusing human beings.

The most important work that can be done here is to get into the brains of the millions the ideas, noble sentiments and spiritual enthusiasm of the ablest minds.

This work is done mainly by school teachers, actors, clergymen and newspaper men.

To-day we consider exclusively the work that the actors do.

They stimulate the public mind, free it from routine and monotony, so deadening, and put into it the light of new and worthy thoughts.

Goethe said truly that good German plays and actors would do more to make Poland German than could be done by a hundred thousand soldiers.

The actor presents the idea LIVING. For one mind able to appreciate fully the WRITTEN word, there are a thousand that get the complete idea only when it is ACTED—seen with the eye and heard through the spoken word.

The actor makes great thoughts LIVE. He adds his personality and trained understanding to the playwright's work.

No one can estimate the inspiration that this world owes to such geniuses as Booth, Rachel, Garrick, Bernhardt, Siddons. And in our own day and land it is hard to overestimate the effect on the stage and on the public mind of a character such as that of Maude Adams, and others that honor their profession.

What the wind and the rain do for the seeds, scattering them and making them grow, the actors do for ideas, scattering them and making THEM grow.

And the serious actors, interpreting the greatest writers, are perhaps not the most useful and important in their professions.

We live in a tired and worried world—a world hungry for amusement and relief from care.

The man or woman able to amuse, to drive away wrinkles and frowns, is a public benefactor and a blessing in humanity. There are thousands such on the stage.

The end of the stage and of good acting would be a calamity to the world, a darkening of the sun of cheerfulness and happiness.

So may there be many happy new years for the actors, the playwrights and the managers that lighten the burden of humanity's chess.

May they be better rewarded and more highly appreciated.

May the critics learn and digest that valuable saying: "La critique est aisee, mais l'art est difficile."

May they think more of judicious praise and less of flippant rebuke.

May they realize that the cheapest and poorest of wit is that which belittles others, and that no criticism has value except that which is constructive and helpful.

May the public appreciate the hard workers of the stage, always ready and generous when charity calls, and themselves so often early forgotten.

United States Should Be First to Recognize Chinese Republic

The resolution of Chairman Sulzer of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, extending the sympathy of this great Republic to the new Chinese Republic and holding out the promise of recognition at as early a date as possible, will meet with the cordial indorsement of this free country.

It is exactly in line with the advocacy of the AMERICAN since the Chinese revolution began.

Of course, the greatest of all republics cannot withhold its sympathy from the latest republic of the world.

The freedom-seeking citizens of China control eighteen provinces and have established a capital. They have summoned to the construction of a government the best and wisest men of the ancient empire.

They have moved forward with commendable vigor and conservatism to the mighty task before them, and have won the respect and confidence of other nations.

The stir of new and better things in China is too wide and too deep ever to rest this side of liberty and independence, and it is certain to succeed.

The appeal of Wu Ting-fang to all civilized nations to assist in this fight for freedom was voiced through a personal letter to Mr. William R. Hearst four weeks ago.

As France helped our country to freedom in its life and death struggle for freedom, and will never be forgotten on these shores, so America now should be the first to reach out its hand of helpful sympathy to this ancient and kindly people struggling out of the darkness and tyranny of despotism into the light and life of liberty.

The Republic of China will have the sympathy of the world.

Ballad of Hard Luck

By DAMON RUNYON

I'M settin' behind four aces, an' I opened, under the gun;
Eleven bucks an' a half in the pot, w'ich I thinks is as good as won;
An' I'm dreamin' o' steak an' taters, wit' a scuttle to come along—
When I hears a crash on the skylight;
A terrible smash on the skylight;
An' a cop drops through the skylight—
So I figgers that somethin's wrong!

I'm holdin' a ticket on Rose Leaf, at a price o' fifty to one;
An' Rose Leaf leads to the wire, so the race is as good as done;
An' I'm dreamin' o' liftin' a mortgage, an' my voice breaks out in song—
When I see her fall near the wire;
A yard or two from the wire;
An' the favorite busts past the wire—
So I figgers that somethin's wrong!

I'm always grabbed near the finish, when my dreams are a rosy hue
(Always up at the finish, just when the pay-off's due);
When I'm reachin' to take the money, an' feelin' so very strong—
I hears a thump at my portal;
A terrible clump at my portal;
An' the landlord bawls through my portal—
So I figgers that somethin's wrong!

Poor and content is rich and rich enough.
—SHAKESPEARE.

Dinkelspiel on Swearing Off

By GEORGE V. HOBART

UND I set to Spiegel: "Vell, Max, I suppose if you made such a nice leedle bunch of goot resolutions mit der New Year, alretty, yes?"

"Sure!" set Spiegel.

Und I set to Spiegel: "Such is an idea vich appeals mostly to dose mit a hesitating chin. You know, Max, ven a man has to vait till a complete holiday like New Year's to stop doing someding vich does him no goot he generally starts up again mit der fairst Saturday vich contains a half holiday. Py Chove! It is a nice idea to vatch von of dose fellows svear-off to see how long he doun'd keep it. Sometimes, Max, I vunder vot is der use to make bad habits in der mind und den use der same mind to promise yourself you von't make dem any more. Dit you remember Gust Horseman, vich he used to keep der leedle grocery store near der fire engine?"

"Sure!" set Spiegel.

Und I set to Spiegel: "Vell, I haf it in der memory ven Gust fairst began to svear. You know, Max, swearing is von of der most useless accomplishmentings vich efer used a man's voice to show itself off. A sensible man has no more use for swear words den a fish has for an umbrella. Vell, anyvay, Gust began der idea to svear von day on a street car ven a stout gentleman stepped toughtfully on his foots. Gust responded to der fat man's attentions mit a slight upvard cheri of der head vile at der same time der vord 'Dummitall!' slipped from behind his gold-plated teeth mit a slight hissing sound. Dis vas der fairst fatal step. In annuder week Gust vas able to use der same vord mitoudt der help of a fat man on his foots. In a cubble of weeks he began der translation into English of all der Cherman oaths from der time der fairst robber baron disconfered der Rhine down to der night ven der soldier chabbed Bismarck mit a bayonet by mistake. It got so bad, Max, dot if you yust set, 'Vie gehts?' to Gust it took him four oaths, nine swearvords und eighteen damnits before he could answer, 'Simlich.' I set py him vun day, 'Gust, der inside of your head must look like a sulphur mine trimmed mit brimstone. Vy doan'd you stop such a foolishness?' You know a man dot svears der vay you do ain'd got no more brains den der east end of a peanut!' Gust responsed me, und ven I picked ould der answer from der garbage around it I found it contained der statement dot he vas vaiting for New Year's to svear-off svearing. Und dis vas Chuly yet, mit der muskittoes und der hot nights und udder eggscuses to encourage him. Py Chorge! human nature is nearly always in its childhoods, ain'd it, Max?"

"Sure!" set Spiegel.

Und I set to Spiegel. "Vell, anyhow, Gust vent on from bad vords to verse vords. He kept a piece of wrapping paper und a blue pencil py der bedside so if he t'ought of a goot oath in his sleep he could vake up und make a note of it to use der next day. He spoke ould such violent lankvich in der store dot a shoulder of mutton vich vas formerly a sensitive sheep vould fall off der block und try to bury itself in der saw-dust. He made dot butcher shop so hot mit his svear vords dot his customers began to complain because der steak vas cooked too vell done. Vell, anyvay, New Year's rolled itself around und I met up mit Gust. He vas all dressed ould in a Princess Albert coat, mit a silk hat und a cane mit der same nationality as a corkscrew. He vas so proud mit himself because he hatten't svore for nearly t'ree hours. Ve valked together down der Afenue und I vas yust congratulationing him on der force of his character ven a unused piece of slush slid him from under himself und he sat rapidly down on der vet pavement mit a sharp crash. Is all my eggsperience, Max, nefer before dit I hear such a collection of verbal gasoline eggsplosions. 'Dam der nation,' he set, 'dam der rivers! dammital! I doan'd care so much dot I haf muddy trousers but, dam der nation, now I got to vait till next New Year's before I can svear-off again! Now I ask you, Max, ain'd such der limit?"

"Sure!" set Spiegel.

A Mohammedan View

By CHESTER FIRKINS

'TWAS on the Day of Christ the Cossacks came.
It was a time of peace—none knew of war.
Men tell me that the Cossacks hail their Czar
"Viceroy of Christ," and that their Christ they name
"The Prince of Peace." We do not understand
The "peace" of monarchs in our sister land.

A merchant whom I met in Ispahan—
An Irishman, kindly, yet full of pride—
Told me that, yearly, at the Christmastide
The Western peoples paused; no caravan
Set forth; the blessed Day, he said, was given
To peace and charity by will of heaven.

What is this word called "peace"? I think 'tis "death,"
For death is peaceful by Mohammed's law.
But I, who, 'mid the crash of powder, saw
Babes on dead mothers' breasts, that gasped for breath,
And, wailing, waited for the Cossack sword,
I ask: Why is a Czar Christ's underlord?

It cannot be; for those of other lands
Are not as Cossacks are. There is a man
Who holds the people's love in Teheran;
And he no Persian, but, ou e understands,
Was sent to us from far America,
Where every man is equal to his Shah.

He is a man both generous and brave,
Who has enriched us and would aid us more—
A Christian whom Mohammedans adore,
Who has defied the Briton and the Slav.
Allah protect him! He would not abide
This Herod butchery of Christmastide!
